PEARY DECLINES HONORS.

Acting upon the advice of Gen. Thomas H. Hubbard and Herbert L. Bridgman, President and Secretary, respectively, of the Peary Arctic Club, I wish to express my thanks to friends for their kind offers and invitations, and also beg to say that I have decided not to accept any invitations to receptions or any ovations until the present controversy is settled by competent authority.

Statement by Commander Robert E. Peary at Sydney.

Special to The New York Times.

SYDNEY, N. S., Sept. 21.—To those who stood to-day in the tossing tumult which surged around Commander Robert E. Peary as he landed from the Roosevelt it seemed that Sydney's reception of the explorer must have been relatively as great as was Copenhagen's reception of Dr. Cook. There was this difference: No voice here has been raised to question Peary's claim that he had reached the pole.

The throngs began to cheer as the Roosevelt drew near the densely packed wharf, while the esplanade and the slopes of the hills at the water front were reverberant with lusty cheers. All about was a tossing sea of flags, English and American waving side by side. The Roosevelt herself was gayly decked with bunting, and from her mizzen gaff rippled Old Glory, with the words "North Pole" inscribed diagonally across its folds.

Mayor Richardson climbed on board to extend a welcome to the explorer on the part of the city. Shortly afterward Mrs. Peary and her daughter, who had boarded the Roosevelt from the yacht Sheelah, were helped over the gangplank to the wharf, Commander Peary and the Mayor following. A bevy of girls surrounded the explorer and presented him with a massive emblem, a mound of white flowers surmounted by the American flag, emblematic of the arctic and the conquered pole.

Carriage Pelted with Flowers.

Into a richly decorated carriage which had been held in waiting, Commander Peary, the Mayor, and the American Consul made their way through the crowd and past a long battery of snapping cameras. As the carriage started for the drive to the Sydney Hotel the vehicle and its occupants were pelted with a storm of flowers, while cheer after cheer broke from the surrounding multitude. The carriage made its slow way to a point in front of the hotel veranda, where it came to a halt, and Mayor Richardson rose from his seat and made a short address of welcome to Mr. Peary.

In his speech of welcome Mayor Richardson said:

"Representing the citizens of the City of Sydney, it is with pleasure we welcome you again. Many times during the past this place has witnessed your departure on your life's work, that of reaching the north pole. Next to a Canadian or a citizen of our mother country, no man can or should receive from us a heartier welcome or more sincere congratulations on the success you have achieved than yourself. In former years you have made our harbor your final starting point, and also your first landing after each successive trip, and naturally Commander Peary is well known to our people.

"We cannot allow this opportunity to pass without conveying to you the congratulations not only of the citizens of our city, but also of the whole Canadian people. That you have, after many years of struggle and firm determination, reached the goal of your ambition should cause every man to honor you at this time. Leaving out the question of the benefit to be derived from the finding of the pole, an example has been placed before the young men of the United States and Canada—yes, even the whole world—that should prove a great help to your fellow-men.

"A life given over to the conquering of great obstacles, such as your has been, is one calculated to encourage and energize those who may be aiming at 'Excelsior' in their life, and by remembering you they also may not faint by the way, but after many attempts may reach the goal of their ambitions.

"We join with your host of friends in honoring you on your achievement, and again welcome you, trusting that after your long struggle and sacrifice you may now, during the remaining years of your life, enjoy the comforts of 'home, sweet home,' surrounded by your happy family, your close friends, and world-wide circle of admirers."

Peary Addresses Multitude.

As the explorer rose to reply another burst of cheers came from the throng, and continued for several minutes. At last the tumult sunk so that the voice of the speaker could be heard. The Commander said that he was no stranger to

A SEEING-NEW-YORK AIRSHIP

Expects to Carry Passengers Over Town from an Aeronautic Show.

Glen Curtiss's flying machine will be exhibited at the first annual aeronautic show at Madison Square Garden during the Hudson-Fulton Celebration week, beginning Saturday. It will not be the same aeroplane used by Mr. Curtiss when he won the world's championship cup at Rheims, but a new one and a duplicate of the one Curtiss will use in his flights over the city next week.

One of the features of the show, it was said yesterday, will be a "seeing-New-York" airship, which will leave the roof garden at Madison Square Garden and carry passengers over the city, making several trips daily. This airship was originally intended to compete with Curtiss, Wilbur Wright, and other aviators, but the conditions of the contest were objectionable to the builders and an arrangement has been entered into whereby passengers will be carried over the city. This will be the first time that an airship has been used for this purpose, and many bookings have already been made for trips.

The exhibition in the garden will enable the spectators to get a close view of the various kinds of airships. Among the machines to be exhibited will be monoplanes, quartoplanes, dirigibles, balloons, wind wagons, gliders, helicopters, and pilot and sounding balloons, together with accessories.

The airship to carry people around the city will be known as the American Eagle. It has a capacity of 3,300 cubic feet of gas, and is a huge dirigible with a car eighty feet long, seating fifteen persons. It will be finished to-morrow, and will be operated by Joel T. Rice of Hot Springs, Ark., President of the Hot Springs Airship Company, and John R. Riggs, both noted "sky pilots."

NEW WESTCHESTER RAILWAY.

All the Rights of Way Purchased for a White Plains Branch.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 21.—It is now stated on good authority that the New York, Westchester & Boston Railway has purchased about all of the right of way needed for its White Plains Branch at prices ranging from $3,000 to $8,000 an acre, according to location.

The company has acquired more land than it needs for actual construction purposes, as it is said that it desires to reap any profits that may accrue from the rise of values. The entire route, it is said, will cost over $1,000,000.

According to a tentative map which is now in the hands of its agents the line will cross upper North Avenue, New Rochelle, at the Quaker Ride Road, where the company will build a station on land just acquired from Charles H. Banks. The route then crosses the Walter D. Bonnett property, the property of Charles Nieuhaus, the sculptor, formerly owned by George W. Underhill, and goes through several large tracts, including those of F. A. Stratton, Mrs. Jonathan Carpenter in Weaver Street, and E. C. Potter's apple tree farm.

From there it will run in a northerly direction through the Mercer tract, crossing the old Mamaroneck Road; thence into Scarsdale through property of Thomas Simpson and Chauncey T. Secor, Supervisor of that town. After striking the White Plains line the route is through property of Eugene Reynal, John Mills, and John M. Digney. It then crosses Mamaroneck Avenue and runs along lands of the Bloomingdale Asylum into the Sprague property.

INQUEST IN THE NELSON CASE.

About Two Dozen Witnesses to be Called in the Shooting Mystery.

Special to The New York Times.

CENTRAL ISLIP, L. I., Sept. 21.—Dr. William D. Savage, Coroner of Suffolk County, will hold an inquest to-morrow afternoon into the death of Irving A. Nelson, the bicycle dealer and politician who was murdered early last Thursday morning. District Attorney George H. Furman will be present to question the witnesses, who will number about two dozen.

The cause of death will be described by Dr. Marcus B. Heyman, First Assistant Superintendent of the Central Islip State Hospital for the Insane. This is considered of importance because of the fact that the charge shot into Nelson's back was of buckshot, and Albert Miller, arrested yesterday, has admitted that he and Schwartz had an appointment to go out after deer that night.

The principal witnesses are to be Miller, who was an employe of Nelson; Mrs. Nelson, and Augustus Schwartz, the boarder at the Nelson home. Miss Margaret Lupke will testify regarding her ride to the dance at Bayshore, and, if he can be found, some mysterious man who is said to have uttered a threat against Nelson if he persisted in taking Miss Lupke to the dance, will be forced to tell what he actually said, and where he spent Wednesday night and Thursday morning.

SAILORS GET EVEN.

Pay Their Compliments to the North Carolina When Leave Is Cut Off.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Sept. 21.—For acts of insubordination and violation of rules off the Capes during the target practice shore leave was denied to the 800 men aboard the battleship North Carolina. It was hard to trace the cause of the trouble and the officers decided to punish all alike. A number of sailors are confined in the brig as a result of the trouble on the practice grounds at sea.

On the last night that the North Carolina lay at anchor in Hampton Roads the men settled the score. With luminous paint, used to make targets visible at night, some of them painted over two-thirds of one side of the ship:

"This is a hell of a ship."

The luminous sign attracted great attention from the shore. A rigid investigation has been inaugurated by the officers of the North Carolina, but as yet the identity of the culprits has not been ascertained.

It is reported to-night that sailors and petty officers had engaged in several fisticuffs, endeavoring to enforce the order not to allow any of the sailors to go ashore. The North Carolina sailed for Lewes, Del., to-night.

Atlantic Fleet Anchors Outside Harbor—Wireless Heralds English Squadron's Approach.

KAISER'S ENVOY DUE ALSO

Special Honors for Him and Sir Edward Seymour on Arrival—Hundreds Visit the French Ships.

The Atlantic fleet, under command of Rear Admiral Seaton Schroeder, arrived off Sandy Hook last night and this morning is anchored just outside the entrance to the harbor. By 9 o'clock this morning fifteen battleships, three armored cruisers, and three scout cruisers, in addition to half a dozen naval auxiliaries, will be steaming into the harbor, and some time this afternoon the entire armada will be anchored in the Hudson to the north of the French battleships.

The fleet arrived off the Hook in single file, the battleship Connecticut, flagship of Admiral Schroeder, leading, followed in order by the battleships Kansas, Louisiana, Minnesota, Idaho, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Georgia, Nebraska, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Virginia, Ohio, Missouri, and Wisconsin; the armored cruisers Montana, North Carolina, and New York, and the scout cruisers Chester, Salem, and Birmingham. The Vermont, the other battleship in the Atlantic fleet, arrived in New York several hours ahead of the main column, coming from Bridgeport, Conn., whereas the rest of the ships came from Norfolk.

The scene at the anchorage last night was a busy one. Launches flitted from ship to ship, searchlights ogled sea and land in ten-mile circles, and overhead, all night long, the wireless chattered to and fro from ship to ship and from the flagship to the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

There remains much to be done by the men-o'-war's men before brass will gleam and decks will shine in a style acceptable for Saturday's full-dress occasion. The American ships have just had an overhauling at Norfolk, but after the trip up the coast there must be a day or two of work to bring their toilets up to the standard befitting the event.

The British squadron of four armored cruisers, under Sir Edward Seymour, Admiral of the Fleet, whose pennant will fly from the all-big-gun cruiser-battleship Inflexible, is expected to-day. Word came by wireless yesterday that the British squadron will get here at 11 A. M.

The gunboat Morales, representing Mexico, came in yesterday morning and is anchored off Fifty-ninth Street. She is a trim-looking little craft. Her guns shine like gold, and her decks are as clean as a ballroom floor. She is commanded by Commander Manuel Castellanos, and has on board Capt. Manuel E. Ezeguirre, Commandant of the Vera Cruz Naval Station, and official representative of Mexico.

The Inflexible, Sir Edward Seymour's flagship, of the British squadron, is about as fast as the Mauretania, and has been kept down to half speed so that the Drake, the Duke of Edinburgh, and the Argyll, the other cruisers in the squadron, might keep up with her.

The French battleships Justice, Vérité, and Liberté, which arrived on Monday afternoon, are anchored off Eightieth Street, and were the centre of interest in the Hudson yesterday. A continual stream of visitors were welcomed on board during the early afternoon, many being from New York's French colony. The vessels are among the largest in the French Navy.

Admiral Le Pord, the French commander, called during the day upon Capt. J. B. Murdock, U. S. N., the Commandant of the navy yard, and upon Major Gen. Wood at Governors Island. Gen. Wood and Capt. Murdock returned the French Admiral's calls yesterday afternoon.

The work of wiring the ships for the combined illumination next Saturday night will begin at once. Every part of the superstructures from the gun decks to the tops of the funnels and military masts will be entwined in electric lights, and the illumination is expected to be one of the most magnificent naval sights the world has ever seen, as nearly half a million tons of battleships, cruisers, and torpedo craft will be represented in the picture.

It was announced yesterday that Grand Admiral von Koester of the German Navy, the personal representative of the Kaiser, would reach New York to-day on the Hamburg-American liner Bluecher.

Grand Admiral von Koester will be met by Gen. Howard Carroll and William H. Truesdale, representing the Hudson-Fulton Committee, who will go down the bay in a special steamboat to which the Admiral will be transferred. The party will then be taken to the Hotel Astor, where the Admiral will be officially welcomed by ex-Mayor Low.

The same honors wil be paid to Sir Edward Seymour of the British squadron when he arrives. Grand Admiral von Koester will not fly his flag from any of the German vessels during the celebration. It was said yesterday, however, that at all functions attended by him the place of honor will be accorded to him as the ranking officer present.

The St. John's Guild is to provide the hospital ship Juillard for the care of any of the sailors of the American and foreign ships that are to be in the Hudson River pageant. The Juillard will be anchored off Ninety-eighth Street. She has accommodations for about seventy-five patients, and will have a full corps of doctors and surgeons.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Sept. 21.—Ten thousand people lined the bluff walk this afternoon to watch the Atlantic fleet as it passed. An excellent view was afforded. As the eighteen vessels passed Ocean Park Casino the flag was dropped once for each ship. The ringing of the fire alarm was the signal of the approach of the fleet, and two thousand school children hurried to the beach. There was tumultuous cheering and much waving of flags, firing of guns, and honking of auto horns as the fleet passed on toward New York Harbor.

GEORGE HAZELTON UNDER INDICTMENT

Arrested with L. Scott Kemper on a Blackmail Charge—Said to be a Playwright.

$160,000 CASE INVOLVED

Chicago Man Whose Sister-in-Law Accuses Him of Misappropriating Property Is the Complainant.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—George Hazelton, Jr., said to be a playwright, and L. Scott Kemper, a New York lawyer, were indicted on charges of attempted blackmail by the Grand Jury to-day following the appearance before the jury of James H. Channon, a wealthy ship chandler and clubman, and Mrs. Channon, his wife.

The Channons took before the jury letters purporting to be signed by L. Scott Kemper and George C. Hazelton, Jr., containing threats of scandal and exposure in case of non-payment of a $160,000 claim. Mr. and Mrs. Channon appeared before the Grand Jury this morning.

"I will use every means in my power to see that these men are made to answer for the suffering and worry they caused me," said Channon to-night.

Bench warrants were issued and Kemper and Hazelton were arrested late to-night at the Chicago Athletic Club. Being arrested on bench warrants, they could not give bond to-night and will have to remain in jail all night.

When the warrants were turned over to the State Attorney's office the detectives were told that Hazelton and Kemper had been in Chicago two weeks, and might possibly be found at the Congress Hotel or the Chicago Athletic Club. During the early part of the evening the detectives were unable to find the two men.

Channon and his wife told the Grand Jury that Kemper and Hazelton represented Henry Ludlam, a New York actor who married three years ago Miss Mabel Arey, a half sister of Mrs. Channon. Mrs. Mabel Arey Ludlam inherited an estate valued at $200,000 from her father, Henry A. Reif, a prominent Chicago lawyer of an earlier generation. Before she became of age James H. Channon, her sister's husband, acted as administrator of this estate.

The Channons told the jury that at the time of Miss Arey's marriage to the actor a complete settlement was effected between Channon and his ward. Since that time Ludlam, they said, had asserted frequently that prior to the time of his wife's coming of age the administrator had misappropriated funds to the amount of $160,000.

Efforts have been made at various times to collect all or portions of this amount, Mr. and Mrs. Channon said before the jury. They added that moves in this direction have been accompanied with threats to attack their social position.

Two years ago the Channons gave back to Mrs. Ludlam a house on Dearborn Avenue, valued at $30,000, which Mabel Arey Ludlam previously had given to her sister, Mrs. Channon, and which the Channons had occupied for several years.

They moved to the Plaza Hotel at the time and announced that they had given back the house at the request of Mrs. Ludlam, though the Channons stated at the time that they believed her husband had forced Mrs. Ludlam to make the demand. The house was advertised for sale, and subsequently was rented.

Channon says Ludlam or his agents made one appeal after another to Channon's father, Henry Channon, or to Mrs. James H. Channon, never addressing Channon himself.

L. Scott Kemper's address is given in the City Directory as Room 10-D, 220 Broadway. This same address is also given for George C. Hazelton, Jr. The George C. Hazelton, Jr., whose address is thus given is a well-known playwright. After traveling for three seasons with the Modjeska and Booth-Barrett companies to improve his knowledge of stagecraft he came to New York in 1901 to practice law and to write novels and plays, the best known of which is "Mistress Nell."

In addition to "Mistress Nell" he wrote "Captain Molly" and "The Raven," plays and a historical work dealing with the art and architecture of the Capitol at Washington.

In 1907 he formed a theatrical partnership with Wilfred North, with an office at 1,402 Broadway, for the purpose of using the scenery, plays, and properties of Richard Mansfield. He was the financial partner and North the active theatrical partner.

At the home of George C. Hazelton, Jr., 52 East Twenty-first Street, it was said last night that he had gone to Chicago a week ago to attend to the case of a client in that city.

DIED TRYING TO SAVE DOG.

Sherman Killed in Struggling to Pull Hound from Third Rail.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 21.—In a vain effort to save the life of his hunting dog, which had come in contact with the third rail of the "Fast Line," electric branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad, on the Meadows, a man believed to be I. W. Sherman of this city lost his life to-day.

Sherman had been hunting and was on his way to this city after having been searching for mud hens on the Meadows. The dog, wet from swimming after the game, ran beside his master and came in contact with the rail. The man tried to help his dog and seized him by the leg to pull him away from the rail. The wet fur of the animal made a perfect contact and Sherman received the full force of the current. He fell with one leg on the rail and was in that position when discovered by the crew of a train running in here from Camden. The man and dog were both dead when found.

CRISIS IN FUSION; DEADLOCK REACHED

Success of Movement Threatened by Demands of Woodruff, Parsons, and Labor Men.

NINE CANDIDATES NOW

Regulars Against Ivins and Stimson—Gaynor Makes a Strong Attack on Fusion—Another Meeting To-night.

After a day prolific in developments the discussion of candidates by the anti-Tammany Fusion Conference was virtually sidetracked last night for the more serious consideration of preserving the integrity of the movement. A crisis has been reached which may culminate either at the meeting of the Committee of One Hundred scheduled for this afternoon or at a meeting to-night of the full Fusion Conference, composed of delegates from the various anti-Tammany organizations invited by the Hundred to participate in the discussion of ways and means to defeat Tammany Hall.

As the situation shaped up when the meetings of the leaders in the anti-Tammany movement drew to a close last night these dangers lurked in the path of fusion:

The representatives of the Republican organization in Kings County, headed by Republican State Chairman Timothy L. Woodruff, assumed an attitude of uncompromising hostility to the plan of fusion all along the line advocated by the Hundred, the Independence League, and the New York County Republican Committee.

Twenty representatives of organized labor who hold membership on the Committee of One Hundred, insisted as a unit on the Mayoralty nomination going to one of four independent Democrats, none of whom the Republican organizations of the four counties in New York City is willing to accept, and threatened to withdraw from the conferences unless their demand is conceded.

Friends of Justice William J. Gaynor of the Supreme Court who are members of the Committee of One Hundred prepared to enter the meeting of the committee scheduled for this afternoon to make a fight for the indorsement of their candidate, predicting that if they don't win their point the fight may result in the breaking up of the fusion movement and cause a wide split in the Hundred. Finally, amid this general confusion, Justice Gaynor himself issued a statement last night practically attacking the sincerity of the fusion movement.

The situation that came to the surface when the full Fusion Conference met at 8 o'clock last night to receive reports from the two sub-committees it had created to consider candidates and frame a declaration of principles, had been brewing all day. Both committees were in a virtual deadlock when the time came to submit a report. They reported "progress," but very little progress had been made.

In the Committee on Candidates the process of elimination had been going on all day until there were on the tentative Mayoralty slate, when the committee adjourned last night, nine candidates in place of the three that had been there before. A member of the committee last night laid this situation at the doors of President Parsons of the Republican County Committee, and Republican State Chairman Timothy L. Woodruff.

Regulars Hostile to the Hundred.

"There can be fusion only on two of the candidates now on the tentative Mayoralty slate," said this member. "One of these men is William M. Ivins, the other is Henry L. Stimson. Mr. Parsons does not want Mr. Stimson, Mr. Woodruff doesn't want either Ivins or Stimson. In their place they are trying to palm off on us some machine Republicans for whom we could not undertake to hold the Committee of One Hundred in line against such a candidate as Justice Gaynor."

There is no doubt that there was a lot of jockeying, manoeuvring, manipulation, and some working at cross purposes in the Committee on Candidates, which remained in practically continuous session behind closed doors. The statement ascribing to Mr. Parsons hostility to the candidacy of Henry L. Stimson did not prevent Mr. Parsons from undertaking to guarantee Mr. Stimson's friendly attitude toward labor, when one of the labor representatives on the Committee of One Hundred appeared before the Committee on Candidates and urged against him that his attitude on the subject was not known.

On the committee appointed to frame the declaration of principles of the fusion movement, the trouble arose over a plank defining the attitude of the conferrees on the subway question. Some extremists raised objections to anything except a declaration of city-built subways, even when the city did not have any money to build subways with. Other members of the committee declined to subscribe to anything like that, and declared in favor of building subways by private capital under proper safeguards, to insure city control, in an emergency.

But the committee which was drafting the declaration of principles was practically lost in the shuffle, and the attention of all was focused on the Committee on Candidates. This body got together at 11 o'clock with Chairman E. H. Outerbridge of the Committee of One Hundred, presiding. Their meeting was held behind closed doors at the headquarters of the Hundred.

The discussion was informal, and there were lots of it. Reports that came from the meeting room had it that Mr. Pasons and State Chairman Woodruff, both of whom are members of the committee, did less talking than any other members, and that County Chairman Charles E. Gehring of the Independence League was a good listener, too.

Ivins Stock Drops.

About the first report that reached those waiting without was that Ivins stock had gone down considerably and that the attitude of Republican State Chairman Timothy L. Woodruff was largely responsible for it. Mr. Woodruff made it plain from the outset that while he regarded Mr. Ivins as a good man, his constituents in Brooklyn would have nothing of Mr. Ivins. Judge Jacob Brenner, Chairman of the Republican Executive Committee of Kings, had pleaded Mr. Ivins's cause among the Brooklyn Republicans, and so had indeed Mr. Woodruff himself, but to no avail.

Ernest Harvier, head of the Democratic Union, was the only member of the Committee on Candidates who would discuss what was going on in the committee room.

"This discussion in there," said Mr. Harvier, "reminds me of nothing as

WHITNEY WRITES OF COOK.

Credited with Saying Cook Told Him He Had Reached the Pole.

FISHKILL LANDING, N. Y., Sept. 21.—Mrs. William Blodgett, a sister of Harry Whitney, the New Haven sportsman, to whom Dr. Cook says he intrusted duplicate proofs that he had reached the pole, is a resident of Fishkill. It is said here that she has in her possession a letter from Mr. Whitney written from Labrador either to herself or her mother at New Haven in which he writes that Dr. Cook told him that he had reached the pole and he (Whitney) believes Cook.

Mrs. Blodgett could not be reached to-night, but her friends say that she has such a letter, dated Sept. 5, and that in it occurs this passage:

"I saw Dr. Cook at Etah. He has accomplished a great thing and is bound to be a great man. He claims to have reached the pole, and from evidence I believe he has."

Mr. Whitney's stepmother in New Haven has said hitherto that she has received letters from her son, but they said nothing about Dr. Cook having told him that he had reached the pole.

NEW PLANT FOR GLACE BAY.

Marconi Arrives to Instal Powerful Wireless Apparatus.

William Marconi, the inventor of wireless telegraphy, arrived here yesterday on the Cunard liner Caronia accompanied by Jameson Davis, one of the Directors of the Marconi Company of London.

To a TIMES reporter Mr. Marconi said he had come over to superintend the reconstruction of the power station at Glace Bay, which was destroyed by fire two months ago.

"It will be equipped with the latest and most powerful appliances for sending messages across the ocean, and I hope that the station will be in full working order by Jan. 1, 1910," said the inventor.

He expects to leave town to-morrow night for Montreal to consult with the Canadian company on his way to Nova Scotia. He was met at the pier by John Bottomley, Vice President of the American Marconi Company.

POSITION OF HALLEY'S COMET.

Letters from Prof. Frost Tell Some Details of Two Observations.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 21.—A letter received at the Harvard College Observatory from Prof. E. B. Frost of the Yerkes Observatory, gives some details of the recent observations there of Halley's comet. The comet was observed by Prof. S. W. Burnham with the forty-inch telescope on Sept. 15 in approximately right ascension 6 hours 18 minutes 51.1 seconds, and declination plus 17 degrees 9 minutes and 44 seconds. The comet was also photographed with the aid of the two-foot reflector on Sept. 15 and 16 by Oliver J. Lee.

A second letter from Prof. Frost states that the comet was also observed visually by Prof. E. Barnard on Sept. 17, in approximately right ascension 6 hours 19 minutes 0.90 seconds, and declination plus 17 degrees 9 minutes 0.8 seconds, and was again photographed by Mr. Lee.

FINDS NEW ESKIMO TRIBE.

Explorer Bower Also Loses an Eye and Suffers Shipwreck.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—On board the whaler Jeannette which arrived in this port yesterday heavily laden with furs, blubber, and tales of the frozen north, was W. J. Bower, an arctic explorer, who reports the discovery of a new tribe of Eskimos on a point of Prince Albert Land.

The newly discovered natives who call themselves Nunacaotics are tall and look like the North American Indians. The explorer as the first white man ever seen by them was cordially welcomed by the strange tribesmen, and he obtained many rich furs from them. From the town of the Nunacaotics, Bower proceeded further north, where he discovered immense copper deposits.

On this trip Bower lost one eye through the bite of a spider. This was not the end of Bower's troubles, for after the eye ball was removed by the crude surgery of an Eskimo the schooner used by the party was wrecked and the adventurers had to walk 130 miles to Point Barrow, where they were taken on board the Jeannette.

TO APPEAL SARATOGA CASES.

Carbonic Acid Gas Concerns to Take Them to Court of Appeals.

ALBANY, Sept. 21.—Supreme Court Justice William S. Andrews, who presided over an extraordinary term of court ordered by Gov. Hughes to hear the actions begun by the State for permanent injunctions to prevent the continued pumping of carbonic acid gas from the springs at Saratoga, announced to-day in closing the term that he would grant judgment in favor of the State in each case. The formal judgment will be issued to-morrow at Syracuse.

The actions were directed against the Geysers Natural Gas Company, the New York Carbonic Acid Gas Company, the Lincoln Spring Company, and the Natural Carbonic Gas Company.

Counsel on both sides have agreed to submit Justice Andrews's decision to the Appellate Division, Third Department, for a pro forma affirmance so that the questions involved can be taken direct to the Court of Appeals.

TIMES AIRSHIP SIGNALS.

How Operators at Conspicuous Points Will Tell of Flights.

The signals which the Signal Corps of the Army are to operate next week to let the public know when Mr. Wright or Mr. Curtiss will fly from Governors Island, will be managed with the aid of field glasses. There will be five operators; one stationed at Governors Island, another on the Singer Building tower, the third in the Times tower, and the other two on the Brooklyn and Queensboro Bridges.

The Governors Island operator will hoist the first signal from the flagpole on the island, and then the Singer operator, the Times operator, and the men on the Brooklyn and Queensboro Bridges will immediately repeat the signal, which will tell whether or not a flight is probable and if so when. The operators are picked men from the Signal Corps detachment at Fort Wood, on Bedloe's Island.

These are the signals to be displayed:

White flag with red centre will mean that the weather is favorable.

The black flag with white centre will indicate weather conditions unfavorable and flight improbable that afternoon.

The white flag and the red flag flying together, the white over the red, will indicate that a flight is probable within an hour.

All three flags flying together, one above another, will indicate that an aeroplane has left the island and is then in flight.

Audible signals, consisting of bombs, will also be used at each of the signal stations named; one bomb announces a flight probably in an hour, two bombs a flight in fifteen minutes, and three bombs flight then in progress.

DR. COOK HOME; NO PROOFS YET

Warmly Welcomed Down the Bay and Taken to Brooklyn Enwreathed in Roses.

HIS DATA TO DENMARK FIRST

The University of Copenhagen's Scientists He Now Says Will Make It Public.

WON'T TALK ABOUT PEARY

Or Comment on the Latter's Refusal of Public Honors Till the Pole's Discovery Is Settled.

Amid shrieking whistles and tumultuous cheers, Dr. Frederick A. Cook returned home yesterday on the Oscar II. from his two years' absence in the arctic. From the moment the explorer in the morning stepped from the steamer to the small tug in which his wife had gone down the bay to meet him until long after nightfall Dr. Cook was hailed by his admirers as the discoverer of the north pole, and a home-coming welcome was accorded to him the sincerity of which could not be doubted.

It is true that Manhattan did not stretch itself, in an official sense, to honor the explorer. Mayor McClellan was up-State, and Acting Mayor McGowan was not in evidence where the crowds gathered to greet the explorer. But Brooklyn, the home of Dr. Cook, fairly outdid itself. Whatever Manhattan lacked in enthusiasm over him Brooklyn made up.

Will Send Proofs to Denmark.

In interviews, brief as they were, which Dr. Cook gave in the day he declared he had brought back with him ample proofs that he was the discoverer of the north pole. These proofs he was asked to produce yesterday, but he insisted that he would not make them public at this time. He proposed, he said, to send them to the University of Denmark, at Copenhagen, where the Danish scientists would make them public.

Already, Dr. Cook declared, his story of his dash to the pole had been approved by Daagaard-Jenson, Inspector of Danish North Greenland. The Governor of Upernavik has assured the Danish Government of his conviction that Dr. Cook had reached the pole. It was upon this indorsement, Dr. Cook said, that the Danish people accepted his story.

Dr. Cook was silent as to the challenge to his assertion made by Commander Peary. He declared that he would not answer Commander Peary's criticisms until Peary had come to New York, when, the explorer said, he would be willing to confront the Commander. Reminded that Commander Peary had insisted that Dr. Cook had "never been at the north pole or anywhere near it," and that he "had Cook nailed," Dr. Cook merely replied:

"When Mr. Peary comes to town I will answer him; not before."

Late last night, after the explorer had retired to his apartment in the Waldorf, a TIMES reporter sent him a copy of Commander Peary's telegram, refusing to attend receptions or accept public honors until the question who had discovered the pole should be settled. Dr. Cook sent back word that he had no comment to make upon it.

All through the day Dr. Cook assumed an attitude of calm reserve. He was in fine humor, and smiled upon the crowds who cheered him, waved American flags at him, and hailed him without reservation as the discoverer of the pole. He chatted with old friends who patted him on the back and told him how proud they were of him. But he would not be drawn into any discussion that had in it a taint of doubt that he had done the things which he says he has done and will prove that he has done, or a suggestion of criticism of his former leader, Peary. He waved all suggestions of doubt aside with the remark that "that matter ill take care of tself."

Dr. Cook declined to reveal anything at all concerning the scientific observations he made on his trip north. He impatiently remarked at one time when pressed to give the public some explicit evidence that he had discovered the pole on April 21, 1908:

"I'm too tired to talk about that now. I will tell about it later."

When inquiries as to the proofs he had brought back with him were persisted in he made a manifest effort not to lose his temper, but indicated equally plainly that he was not eager to have the inquisition proceed.

"Please do not press that matter now," he urged. "You must wait."

No Fear of Whitney's Report.

Dr. Cook made it clear that he fears no word from Harry Whitney, the New Haven sportsman, now on a hunting trip in the Jeanie, who is said to have a duplicate set of the explorer's proofs with him. Dr. Cook intimated that he is waiting eagerly to hear from Whitney. He was told that Commander Peary's men on the Roosevelt had said that when Whitney went aboard that vessel on being picked up at Etah he had mentioned nothing of Cook's having discovered the pole.

"Didn't he?" replied Dr. Cook. "Well, Whitney knew all about it, for I told him when I returned to Etah with the two Eskimos."

"Why was it, do you suppose, that Whitney failed to tell Peary about it?" was asked.

"Why?" repeated Dr. Cook, with a smile. "Really, you will have to wait and ask Whitney. I have every confidence in him."

"When do you expect him to return from his hunting trip?"

"Oh, that I cannot say," answered the explorer. "He wanted to hunt polar bears, and went on the Jeanie for that purpose. He may be back about the middle of October. When he comes he will have with him the set of proofs I intrusted to him. He will substantiate all I have said about communicating to him my discovery of the pole."

Thus it went in every one of the five-minute talks the explorer gave to reporters at intervals during the day. Always Dr. Cook spoke confidently as though he would say:

"There may be some doubters, but I will convince them."

Arrival of the Oscar II.

The Oscar II. lifted her anchor off Fire Island just after sunrise and slowly steamed to Quarantine, reaching there before 7 o'clock. About the time the Oscar II. was starting for Quarantine the tug John C. Gilkinson, with Mrs. Cook, the explorer's wife, their two children, the explorer's two brothers, and Dr. Roswell Stebbins, Chairman of the Reception Committee of the Arctic Club of America, left the Battery. The tug arrived at Quarantine just as the steamer loomed out of the gray fog.

There was a blast from the siren of the Oscar II. and a shriek from the tug's whistle. Mrs. Cook, standing on the deck of the smaller craft with her children, raised her hand to her eyes and peered over toward the dimly outlined Oscar II. for a glimpse of her husband. There were probably a thousand passengers at the steamer's rail all watching to see Mrs. Cook. Dancing around the Oscar II. were half a dozen tugs carrying reporters. A revenue cutter was slowly drawing up alongside the steamer.

Dr. Cook, on the steamer's deck, espied the John C. Gilkinson. He lifted his derby hat and waved it. His wife responded with a wave of her handkerchief. It took only a few minutes for the tug to reach the side of the steamer and for the gangway steps to be lowered to it. Dr. Cook stood at the gangway eager to board the tug. As he stepped down he was met by his youngest daughter, Ruth, who flung herself into his arms.

"Oh, pop, I'm so glad to see you!" cried the flaxen-haired girl.

"Where's mamma?" asked Dr. Cook, after planting an affectionate kiss on his daughter's lips.

"Here I am," replied Mrs. Cook, stepping from the cabin of the tug, her gloved hands outstretched. "I wanted to greet you first, but Ruth got ahead of me."

Ruth laughed gleefully, while her mother and father embraced.

"I'm so proud of you!" exclaimed Mrs. Cook rapturously.

"I'm glad I got to the old pole," replied Dr. Cook.

Dr. Cook's oldest daughter clasped her arms around his neck and gave him a resounding kiss.

"You've got to stay home now," she declared, with a show of authority.

The explorer laughed, and his gray eyes twinkled as he replied:

"I guess I have done enough to last for a while, anyhow."

Has His Proofs With Him.

In the meantime the Grand Republic, which had left the Battery at 8 o'clock, was hurrying down the bay. The steamboat was late in starting from Pier 1. As she reached a point about midway down Staten Island the Oscar II. came into sight. The Grand Republic saluted and the Oscar II. replied with a blast that echoed from both sides of the bay. Her engines straining to their capacity, the Grand Republic hustled along to find the John C. Gilkinson. She came upon the tug about two miles this side of Quarantine, with the newspaper tugs hovering about like so many flies. Dr. Cook had been talking to the reporters while waiting for the Grand Republic. One of the first things he told them was that he had with him proofs that he had reached the pole.

"What are you going to do with them?" he was asked.

"Submit them to the university at Copenhagen and then let the world have them," replied the explorer. "The geographical societies will probably want to see them."

"Tell us about the proofs,' a reporter suggested.

Dr. Cook waved his hand and was about to reply when the Grand Republic, with smoke pouring thick from her stack, blew her powerful whistle. She had come to within a short distance of the tug without Dr. Cook having observed her. Turning toward the steamer, whose passengers lined the rail, the explorer took off his hat and waved it in wide circles.

There were 424 passengers on the Grand Republic, and they made enough noise to convince the explorer that New Yorkers were interested in this home coming. For all that, however, the steamboat load of welcomers was not as large as had been expected. The Arctic Club had prepared for at least 2,000 persons to go down the bay on the boat, but in this they were disappointed. The 424 passengers, however, cheered the explorer valiantly, and as he prepared to step from the tug to the Grand Republic a loud voice yelled:

"What's the matter with Doc Cook?"

The man with the voice was assured, in a cry from a hundred throats, that there was nothing the matter with Cook, that Cook was "all right."

Explorer Bedecked in Roses.

The explorer made ready to transfer to the steamboat, but before he could do so Miss Ida Lehmann, daughter of the Treasurer of the Arctic Club, jumped to the tug's deck and put a wreath of roses about Dr. Cook's neck. Dr. Cook indicated his thanks. Then, with the huge wreath in danger of being torn away, he went down the gangplank into the arms of a frantically cheering throng.

"This is almost as bad as fighting your way to the pole," he gasped, his face wearing a broad smile.

"Oh! you, Uncle Fred!" cried a feminine voice, and Miss Lillian Cook, the explorer's niece, edged her way through the crowd. Dr. Cook struggled against the crush until he had made a path for her. She kissed him and the crowd cheered again. Then while he was hemmed in at the gangway to the Grand Republic he turned to a member of the committee and asked him to give out a statement he had prepared for the newspaper men. With that he took some fifty typewritten copies from his pocket and handed them over. Here is the statement:

Dr. Cook's Formal Statement.

> ON BOARD THE OSCAR II.—After one of the most delightful trips of my life across the Atlantic, I am indeed glad once more to see the shores of my native land. I have come from the pole. I have brought my story and my data with me. The public has already a tangible and a specific record of that trip. In a very short time the narrative, with all the observations, will be published and placed before the world for examination.
>
> It is as easy for you as for me to understand why I cannot, on the impulse of the moment, read off a manuscript which covers the work of two years. As said upon several occasions, all the charges, accusations, and expressions of disbelief are based upon entire ignorance of the supplementary data which I possess. No one who has spoken or written on the subject in opposition to my claim knows of the facts with which such work of exploration is measured. All of the criticisms have been based upon obvious errors in the reproductions of my first dispatch, or upon the discussions of petty side issues presented by unfair critics.
>
> The expedition was private. It was started out without the usual public bombast. Mr. John R. Bradley furnished the money and I shaped the destiny of the venture. For the time being it concerned us only, but the results were so important that on returning I at once placed before the public a report containing the main outline of the work. I have not come home to enter into arguments with one man or with fifty men, but I am here to present a clear record of a piece of work over which I have a right to display a certain amount of pride. When scientists study the detailed observations and the narrative in its consecutive order, I am certain that in the due course of events all will be compelled to admit the truth of my statement.
>
> I am perfectly willing to abide by the final verdict of this record by competent judges. That must be the last word in the discussion, and that alone can satisfy me and the public.
>
> Furthermore, not only will my report be before you in black and white, but I will also bring to America human witnesses to prove that I have been to the pole.
>
> FREDERICK A. COOK.

Refuses Further Details.

The reporters read quickly through this statement, and then crowded around Dr. Cook to try to get something more definite. He was urged to go into details about his trip, to dispel at once the doubts which had been cast on his assertion that he had discovered the pole.

"I have given the public a concise account of my journey, similar to that given by other explorers on their return from a journey of exploration," he replied. "For the present no other details are necessary, and, as a matter of fact, no further specific evidence of my claim has been called for from any side. It has never been customary hitherto for explorers to make their full records public in such haste. As a rule, scientific societies are not remarkable for their rapidity in coming to conclusions. They are usually content to wait until complete data are compiled."

"But there have been many demands for specific data," he was told. "Many scientists and others in this country say they would like to hear something definite."

"They must wait, then," replied Dr. Cook with his ready smile. Then he told of the testimony by Daagaard-Jensen, Inspector of Danish North Greenland, as to the inspection of his records.

Upheld by Danish Officials.

"Daagaard-Jensen, after hearing Knud Rasmussen, the Danish writer, and talking with Gov. Kraul of Upernavik, who has seen and read the entire record, telegraphed to the Danish Government in Copenhagen his assurance of the truth of my assertions," continued Dr. Cook. "He guaranteed them as authentic. The Danish authorities in Greenland, who are in reality the advisers of the Danish Government, have been for nearly four months in possession of all details of my trip. The Danish Government and the University of Copenhagen, as well as the Danish Geographical Society, have on their report taken over the virtual guarantee for the sincerity and authenticity of my records. They have stood up for them, so to speak, before the world. They do not ask me to furnish any further proof or evidence of any kind, but, in justice to Denmark, it is my intention to place the first completed record of my polar journey at the disposal of the University of Copenhagen."

"How about Peary's charges?" Dr. Cook was asked.

Prefers to Think Peary Misquoted.

"Oh, as to that, I must first see something definite," was the answer. "I prefer for the present to think that the statements attributed to him have been incorrectly reported. I am certain that none of the reports that have appeared in print emanate either from my Eskimos, Ahwelah and Etukishuk, who went with me to the pole, or from Harry Whitney. Mr. Whitney has without any doubt kept his promise to me not to say anything about the expedition and its results, and I feel sure of my Eskimos. Mr. Whitney has complete knowledge of all the facts. He is at entire liberty to make public all that he knows. He is neither bound to stand up for me nor for Peary."

The explorer was asked if the two Eskimos would be brought to America.

"Their arrival in America depends entirely upon the possibility of obtaining a vessel to bring them this year," he replied. "Every effort has been made to secure one, and, if at all possible, they will be in New York this year. That they will come is certain, and I intend to give them a year in America. They will be open to any kind of examination and will be ready to reply to any questions."

"Knud Rasmussen also will be requested to come over to New York as soon as he lands in Denmark."

Crowd Jostles the Explorer.

All this time the crowd on the steamer was impatiently trying to get at Dr. Cook, to shake his hand. It had been under extreme difficulties that the explorer had spoken. He was jostled, but he took it all good-naturedly.

"I'll have to stop talking now," he exclaimed. A moment later Bird S. Coler, President of the Borough of Brooklyn, who was the only city official to meet the explorer, was helping Dr. Cook to get through the crowd, up the stairway to the main deck. Mr. Coler took one of Dr. Cook's arms, and John R. Bradley, who equipped the expedition for Dr. Cook, grabbed the other arm. They made slow progress up the stairway. The crowd stepped on the explorer's feet and tugged at his clothes. He arrived half out of breath, at the port deck, and then stood still while the passengers gathered around. The spot selected by the Committee of One Hundred of Brooklyn for the little ceremony of welcome that followed, was much too small to let half the passengers get within earshot. Men clambered up the rails, and women stood upon seats.

In a riot of noise President Coler made a speech to the explorer, at whose side were his wife and children. Not more than a score of the passengers could hear what Mr. Coler said, but when he was through they applauded just the same. Mr. Coler congratulated the explorer, and then remarked:

"I regret, Dr. Cook, that we have not a Mayor who is big enough for our town, to come here and receive you. You are not only an explorer who has discovered the north pole, but you are a gentleman, as has been proved by your holding your counsel while you have been bitterly attacked."

Dr. Cook's Tribute to Denmark.

Dr. Cook bowed, and, while the crowd was silent for the first time since he had come aboard the steamer, he made this reply in a voice that carried to all the passengers:

> Ladies and Gentlemen: To a retiring explorer greater pleasure than the approval of one's own people cannot come. The number present and the cheers make a demonstration that should fire the pride o any one. I should have preferred to come to America first, but this pleasure was denied me. I went to Denmark, and from there wired the results of my trip to America. I was a stranger in a strange land, but the Danish people arose with one voice and guaranteed to the other nations our conquest of the pole.
>
> You have come forward in numbers with a voice of appreciation still more forcible. I can only say that I accept this honor with a due appreciation of its importance. I heartily thank you.

An ear-splitting cheer rent the air and Dr. Cook bowed again.

Mr. Bradley announced that the passengers might now shake Dr. Cook's hand, but that, as there was not room enough on that deck, they would go to the one above. There was a rush up the stairways and the explorer, trampled and pushed, was escorted to the deck, where he promptly clambered to the roof over the saloon deck. His family climbed up after him, along with a hundred others.

Capt. Osbon Rebuffed.

As the handshaking was about to begin Capt B. S. Osbon, Secretary of the Arctic Club, edged up to the explorer.

"I want to make a speech," remarked Capt. Osbon, who is 80 years old and has done some exploring himself.

"No you don't," rejoined Mr. Bradley, interposing himself between Mr. Cook and the Captain.

"I'm Secretary of the club and I'm going to have my say," insisted the Captain.

"Well, then, go ahead," retorted Mr. Bradley.

The Captain turned to Dr. Cook, put out his hand, and exclaimed:

"Doc, I'm glad to see you."

Then he stepped down.

There was a laugh from the crowd, a cheer, and then the handshaking began. Dr. Cook, tanned and appearing to be in rugged health, stood upon the saloon deck, giving each passenger a hearty clasp and a smile as the line filed past him. The explorer kept it up until all of the 424 passengers had passed.

For his aunt, his two sisters-in-law, and several nieces, who greeted him, the explorer had a kiss. He lifted each one of them up to the saloon roof and had them stop with him until the reception was over.

The handshaking ceremony fatigued Dr. Cook, and he went with his family to a stateroom on the deck below, where he stayed while the Grand Republic steamed up the bay. It had been intended to head the steamer immediately for the pier at the foot of South Fifth Street, Brooklyn, where automobiles with Brooklynites were in waiting for a parade, but the committee decided that the Hudson River craft ought to be allowed an opportunity to greet Dr. Cook, so the steamer sailed up the river amid a vociferous roar of whistles. The Grand Republic went up as far as the 130th Street pier and then, after landing about 100 of the passengers, proceeded to the East River.

Brooklyn's Noisy Welcome.

Here the noisiest welcome of all awaited the explorer. Dr. Cook, aroused by the racket, insisted on going to the upper deck. He was invited to the pilot house, and stood there, with his wife and children, as the steamer went up to Randall's Island, turned around, and made its way back to the South Fifth Street pier. All along the river, at nearly every wharf, men stood waving their hats at Dr. Cook. Factory whistles tooted, and every craft in sight of the Grand Republic joined in the salute.

The pier was gayly decorated with flags and bunting, and there an immense throng was waiting. As the Grand Republic steamed in the entire street, from the river front as far as the eye could see, was thronged with eager Brooklynites. At sight of Dr. Cook the crowd on the pier broke into a wild cheer, which was taken up all along the water front. Dr. Cook and his family were taken to an automobile as soon as the steamer had landed, while the committee occupied forty others.

The procession of automobiles, numbering more than 300, all flying the Stars and Stripes, preceded by a band, went out South Fifth Street to Bedford Avenue, the sidewalks along the route lined with cheering spectators. Hats were thrown into the air and flags were waved. Nearly all the buildings along the line of the procession were decorated, some with pictures of the explorer. There was a glitter of satisfaction in the eye of Dr. Cook as he beheld the spectacle.

Arch Before Cook's Old Home.

From Bedford Avenue the line moved into Bushwick Avenue, and here the crowds were even greater. Dr. Cook used to live at 700 Bushwick Avenue. In front of this house, at the intersection of Bushwick, Willoughby, and Myrtle Avenues, a large arch had been erected. Surmounting it was a huge globe, painted in gold, and below that a picture of Dr. Cook, several times life size, beneath which had been painted in letters a foot high:

"We believe in you."

A painted scene representing Dr. Cook making his trip to the arctic was spread clear across the arch. As Dr. Cook's automobile approached the arch four snow-white carrier pigeons were liberated. Dr. Cook's old home had been half concealed behind a mass of flags. The band struck up "Home, Sweet Home" as the house was passed, and the explorer turned to his wife and patted her hand.

Near Dr. Cook's home there are three schools, one of which is a parochial institution. The children stood upon the curb, their feet in perfect alignment, waving flags.

"Howdy, Dr. Cook!" cried a chorus of young voices.

Out Bushwick Avenue to a point a short distance above Evergreen Cemetery the procession of tooting automobiles went and then turned back to the Bushwick Club. Here, for two hours, Dr. Cook stood in the large reception room, while all of Brooklyn that could get into the house called to see him. The wreath of roses, now faded, still clung to his neck.

Had to Adjourn Reception.

This time the explorer did not shake hands, but contented himself with bowing as the line filed by. The idea had been to have this reception kept up until 6 o'clock, with a brief intermission for luncheon, but Dr. Cook became tired and asked the committee to call it off at 4 o'clock. At that time Bushwick Avenue was jammed for five blocks in either direction of the clubhouse with people who wanted to join in the reception. When it was announced that Dr. Cook needed to rest and that the reception was at an end the crowd slowly melted away, but hundreds lingered until late in the evening, hoping to catch another glimpse of the explorer.

Conditions at the Pole.

Before retiring to a quiet room on the top feloor of the club, Dr. Cook gave another interview to the reporters. Again he expressed a desire not to talk of Commander Peary.

"Will you tell us what you found at the pole?" asked a reporter.

"Ice, snow, and cold weather," replied the doctor.

"Anything else?"

"Nothing much."

"Will you tell us anything about your observations at the pole?"

"Nothing excepting that I made astronomical observations. I can't say now what they were. That will come later."

"Were conditions at the pole much different from those you found further south?"

"Not much."

"What did you leave with Mr. Whitney?"

"A sextant, a compass, and artificial horizon."

"Is that all?"

"Yes."

"How about the proofs?"

"Oh, yes, I left those, too."

"Will you explain further your charge that Commander Peary stole your stores?"

"I won't say a word about that—not until Peary has come here and will be in a position to defend himself."

"You will repeat your accusation then?"

"Certainly."

"Francke has made affidavit, it is said, that Peary took your stores?" it was said.

"Francke knows what he is talking about, I guess. I hadn't heard that he had made an affidavit. If he did so, what he put in it was probably true."

Dinner at Bushwick Club.

Dr. Cook remained in retirement at the club until the evening, when he was at a dinner given by the Bushwick Club and the Arctic Club of America in co-operation. There were only twenty-two guests, including the explorer and his wife. Several women were among the twenty-two.

Just before 8 o'clock a band of singers, men and women, known as the United Singers, marched from their headquarters, Arion Hall, to the club, and, while the explorer and his friends dined, serenaded him with two songs, "The Day of Our Lord" and "My Sweetheart at Home." At the close of the singing Dr. Cook, accompanied by his wife and others of the party, appeared on the dining room balcony on the second floor of the clubhouse and expressed his thanks, amid the cheering of the crowd, for the welcome accorded him.

At the dinner Samuel S. Whitehouse, a prominent member of the Bushwick Club, presided. In response to the only toast of the evening—the health of the returned explorer—Dr. Cook said:

"You have shown me that it is good to go to the pole. In returning it was a delight to receive the cheer of other nations, but there is no human ecstacy so great as that which comes from the hearts of one's own people. If I talked for an hour I could not accurately express a suitable appreciation of the honor of this momentous welcome. To feel this cordiality for one moment is to dispel all the discomforts of the arctic quest."

Those present at the dinner besides Dr. and Mrs. Cook were Samuel S. Whitehouse, John W. Weber, Mr. and Mrs. William Batterman, Mr. and Mrs. Randell, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Scheidt, H. F. Stranger, John J. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Armbuster, E. Martin, Alfred Gilchrist, Mr. and Mrs. Jeter Hueer, Henry Kenz, Luer Otten, William Seaton, and Frank Mann.

After dinner Dr. Cook and his wife were taken downstairs to the main floor of the clubhouse. After receiving the congratulations of many who were unable to attend the dinner, the front doors of the club were opened and the 700 singers filed in and passed by the explorer, who stood at a point of vantage to receive them, afterward filing out by the back entrance of the club in Hart Street.

Welcome Wearies the Explorer.

Many of those in the procession attempted to shake hands with the explorer, who, however, had stipulated before they were admitted that he was to do no more handshaking. He said he was tired out. To ward off all attempts, he stood some little distance away from the crowd, with his hands behind his back. It was 9:15 o'clock when the last of the singers passed him. Two minutes later Dr. Cook, with his wife and two children, passed out of the back entrance to the club, into an automobile, and were taken to their rooms in the Waldorf-Astoria.

Music hunger had to go unsatisfied, when we got our music through the medium of others

There is more fun in playing a game of golf or tennis than in watching others play. Always, the doing of things oneself brings its own recompense. This is one of the reasons for the rapidly growing success of

THE PIANOLA PIANO

You find real fascination in playing the PIANOLA Piano because it is possible to get so much out of it in expression and artistic interpretation. With other Piano-players, less sensitive and responsive, the pleasure of playing is correspondingly less.

Late models of the PIANOLA and PIANOLA PIANO contain improvements that add greatly to the enjoyment of playing:

With the THEMODIST you bring out the theme or melody clearly and beautifully, as no other Player can do it.

With the METROSTYLE, you have a guide to interpretation, adding those delicate little touches which lift a musical performance completely out of the realm of things mechanical.

With the FULL NOTE SCALE, you have at command the deepest notes of a Liszt Rhapsodie or the runs and trills in the highest treble with which Chopin embellished so many compositions.

The New Sustaining Pedal Device and the Graduated Accompaniment are still other improvements that are in the nature of added refinements to the PIANOLA'S performance.

Yet, one and all, they are exclusive with the PIANOLA and contribute in establishing still more emphatically its position as "The Standard Piano-player of the World."

CAUTION: If you desire the high order of artistic results with which the name "PIANOLA" is synonymous, then you must have the PIANOLA itself—not a mere Piano-player. Only the Aeolian Company makes the PIANOLA.

PEARY LANDS; REFUSES HONORS

Sydney; that all of his expeditions to the pole had started here, and also ended here. On one expedition he had brought back to Sydney a "farthest north," on another the noted meteorite which takes his name, "and now, thank God," said the explorer, fervently, "I have brought back the pole!"

After the speech was done the crowd pressed to the carriage to shake the explorer's hand. The police managed to form a line on one side of the carriage, and for nearly two hours the handshaking went on.

It had been planned to give a big banquet this evening in honor of Commander Peary, but he let it be known that he would prefer to spend the evening with his family, and so the matter was dropped.

Commander Peary will accept no invitations to receptions and no public honors until the question of the discovery of the north pole has been decided by scientific authorities. This he made known to-night in the following statement which he gave out for publication:

> Acting upon the advice of Gen. Thomas H. Hubbard and Herbert L. Bridgman, President and Secretary respectively of the Peary Arctic Club, I wish to express my thanks to friends for their kind offers and invitations, and also beg to say that I have decided not to accept any invitations to receptions, or any ovations, until the present controversy is settled by competent authority.

Commander Peary supplemented this briefly. He was asked when the public was likely to get a decision on this subject, and he replied:

"I do not know, but what I have to say will not be very long delayed. Whether my statement will be issued in one week or two weeks depends on circumstances."

Starts for Home To-day.

The explorer will leave Sydney at 7 o'clock to-morrow morning and will reach his home on Eagle Island Friday morning. Apparently Commander Peary has made up his mind to remain at that place for some time, for in speaking of his plans, he said:

"If the newspaper correspondents desire it, I will arrange an hour each day to meet them at South Harpswell, three miles from Eagle Island and fifteen miles from Portland, or they can come to Eagle Island at the time appointed."

Before reaching his decision not to appear at public functions, Commander Peary had promised to attend a reception between trains at Bangor, and this he will do. He will stay in Portland Thursday night. As yet he has made no arrangements for lectures. He said he knew nothing personally about the Hudson-Fulton parade, and could not outline any programme of his immediate plans.

The Roosevelt Robbed of Souvenirs.

The Roosevelt with all of her crew will sail for New York to-morrow morning. But she will not sail with all of her souvenirs. In the excitement attending the debarkation of the Peary party and the subsequent speechmaking and handshaking, no one paid any attention to the crowd as it crawled over the bulwarks of the Roosevelt directly after Peary and his party had left.

In less than an hour the Roosevelt had been gutted of everything in the way of souvenirs that the souvenir hunters could conceal. They even took the diary of McMillan and the journal that had been kept by Borup, books of inestimable value to their owners and of no value whatever, to the souvenir hunters.

These included records of tides and animal life north of 82 degrees, the names of all the Eskimos in the Etah region, and more than a hundred books in which many important marginal notes had been made. No records bearing on the dash to the pole were lost. The missing books are of immense value, and cannot be replaced, but the authorities are issuing a public appeal for their return.

When Capt. Bartlett went back to his ship from the hotel and discovered how the vessel had been looted he had every stranger driven from the decks and indignantly casting off the vessel's lines, he took her out into the harbor and anchored there safe from prying hands.

When asked if the Roosevelt would take part in the naval parade at the Hudson-Fulton Celebration, Commander Peary said that was a matter which he would leave to the Peary Arctic Club to decide.

First Sight of the Roosevelt.

In the launch Adine, placed at his disposal by her owner, John Ross, the correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES set out in the early watches of the morning to intercept the Roosevelt, coming in from her long sojourn at Battle Harbor. About thirty miles from the entrance to Sydney Harbor the masts of the Roosevelt were descried, and shortly after 9 o'clock the correspondent climbed on board. Dressed in a dark suit of civilian clothes and wearing a yachting cap, the bronzed explorer, who had been chatting with his wife and children on the superstructure deck, came to the railing to meet his visitors.

"Have you yet analyzed your emotions," the explorer was asked, "when you at last stood at the pole?"

"My emotions," Peary replied, "were those of a man who had successfully accomplished what he had set out to do, and I believe that the final successful outcome of these years of effort furnishes just one illustration of the fact that there is nothing that can forever withstand determined effort. Before this discovery of the pole one could truthfully have said that we knew more about the north pole of Mars than we did about the north pole of the earth. That can now no longer be said."

Little Miss Marie Peary, the "snow maiden," dancing near, described herself as being so glad she did not know what to do. What she finally did do was to take rugged Capt. "Bob" Bartlett by the arm and walk him up and down the deck and make him tell her just everything that he had done and everything that her distinguished father had done.

Commander Peary was asked about his future plans.

"I shall be entirely at the disposal of my Sydney friends to-day," he replied, "but this evening I mean to reserve for my wife and children. I mean to leave Sydney on the 7 o'clock train to-morrow morning, make a short stop at Bangor, then proceed to Portland, and arrive at Eagle Island on Friday. What I may do after that depends entirely on circumstances."

Will Not Discuss Cook.

Now a question was asked about the Cook controversy. Peary deprecated it at once.

"I will have nothing to say about Dr. Cook, or his claims," he said. "All that I will say now is what I have once said before. I will say again that Cook's story should not be taken too seriously. The two Eskimos who accompanied him say he went no distance, not out of sight of land. Other men of the tribe corroborate this statement."

Later in the day the subject was reverted to. After declining to answer several questions which had been put to him regarding Cook and his claims, Peary was asked when the controversy was likely to be settled.

"You will have to ask some one else that, some one besides me; but I will say this, so far as I am concerned, the matter will end shortly."

Commander Peary adhered closely to his determination not to discuss the Cook controversy at present, but when his attention was called again to the trouble arising out of his placing one of his men in charge of Dr. Cook's stores at Annatok, he said:

"My boatswain, Murphy, had his written instructions, which will be submitted at the proper time."

With regard to the story told by his cabin boy, William Pritchard, he said he had heard that Pritchard had been informed by Dr. Cook that he had been at the pole. He declined, however, to discuss this matter. Asked when he first heard that Dr. Cook claimed to have been at the pole, the explorer started to reply by saying: "I knew before I reached Etah—" but did not finish the answer he intended to give. He ruled the question out as a forbidden topic.

Commander Peary said that when he parted company with Harry Whitney in August, Whitney said he expected to be home by Oct. 1. The schooner Jeanie would probably go to St. John, N. F., direct, if there were fair winds. Otherwise the Captain would likely report at a Labrador port where there was comunication.

Has No Literary Plans.

"Are you writing, or preparing to write, a book?" he was asked.

"No," was the reply. "Nor am I writing or planning to write anything for any magazine, notwithstanding the many reports to the contrary. I may eventually write, but I am not thinking of doing so now. The only writing that I mean to do in the near future is to prepare my formal and complete report to the Peary Arctic Club and to make my official report to the Coast and Geodetic Survey, that being the branch of the Navy Department to which I was accredited on this recent voyage. I have already sent a short report by wire, but the other will be longer, and will contain much data relating to soundings and tidal observations."

Commander Peary was asked in regard to some criticisms which have appeared as to his having taken the colored man Henson with him in his final dash to the pole instead of one of the scientific members of the expedition.

"I took Henson with me for two reasons," Commander Peary replied. "My first was that after working for one thing for twenty-three years I did not feel called upon to share the honors that might accrue with any other man. When twenty-three years have been sacrificed to obtain an object one cannot be expected to share the accruing honors with one who had not put in one hundredth part of the work that I have.

"The other reason why I took Henson lies in the fact that for arctic work he is the most efficient of any living man. He has now been with me for eighteen years."

"I do not know when I shall go to New York," replied Commander Peary when the direct question was put to him. "I intend to make my report to the Peary Arctic Club, and shall work on it at Eagle Island."

The explorer said he had no definite plans with regard to a visit to New York, and it is believed by his friends that he will remain for some weeks at Eagle Island. It is asserted in some quarters that Commander Peary will remain there until Dr. Cook has submitted his data and records of his polar journey.

Origin of North Pole Flag.

From the mizzen gaff of the Roosevelt floated a big American flag with a wide band of white placed diagonally across it. On the band had been painted the words "North Pole." Commander Peary explained about the flag. Going to a locker in his cabin he drew forth a smaller silken flag which he said Mrs. Peary had made with her own hands and presented to him fifteen years ago. The flag is patched here and there with pieces of white silk. Each patch represents a section that had been cut from it by Peary during his many expeditions to the arctic.

The pieces that had been cut from the flag had been deposited in bottles at the farthest points which the explorer had reached on his successive expeditions. The last cut was made when the explorer reached the pole. This time he cut from it a wide diagonal strip. It was the shape of this cut which suggested the idea of the diagonal band across the big ensign of the Roosevelt.

Mrs. Peary and her children and Col. Borup had met the Roosevelt even further out at sea than had the launch. The party had gone out as guests of Mr. Ross on board his big steam yacht, the Sheelah. Both vessels were halted until the Sheelah's party had been transferred to the Roosevelt, after which the Sheelah proceeded back to Low Point to signal that the Roosevelt was coming in. The Roosevelt's engines remained idle for over an hour to delay her arrival in Sydney and in the meantime the ship was dressed. From the foremast head the steamer flew the Canadian ensign. At the main was the flag of the Peary Arctic Club, and at the mizzen was the burgee of the New York Yacht Club. From the mizzen gaff flew the north pole flag.

Letter from North Pole.

Mrs. Peary received a letter to-day from the north pole in a batch that was waiting for her on board the Roosevelt. It was from Commander Peary, and reads as follows:

> Ninety degrees north latitude, (north pole.)
> April 7.
>
> My dear Jo: I have won out at last. Have been here a day. I start for home and you in an hour. Love to the "kidsies."
> BERT.

Mrs. Peary also received several other letters from the arctic.

It had been Commander Peary's practice to have each supporting party going back carry notes or memoranda addressed to Mrs. Peary, so that if anything should happen to him she would have had the last word. One from the Commander himself was as follows:

> Arctic Ocean, 86 degrees 30 minutes north latitude, March 25, 1909.
>
> My Darling: Just a line by Marvin, who returns from here. As you see, we are past the Italian record, thirty-two days ahead of his time. We passed the Norwegian record, fifteen days ahead of his time. We are travelling at the rate of seventeen minutes of latitude per march. Weather is good, the going good, men and dogs in good condition. We are seventeen marches from Columbia. After Marvin leaves we shall be nine men, sixty dogs, and seven sledges with full loads. Five marches from here the Captain turns back with two men. Love to you and the "kidsies." BERT.
>
> P. S.—I am working like a dog, but am in better condition than at any time during the last expedition. B.

The next was signed by Prof. Marvin, whose life was lost while the letter was in his possession. It was subsequently recovered by Eskimos. The writing, which is in the form of a memorandum, is as follows:

> March 25, 1909.
>
> This is to certify that I turn back from this point with the third supporting party, Commander Peary advancing with nine men in the party, seven sledges, with the standard loads, and sixty dogs. Men and dogs all in first-class condition. The Captain, with the fourth and last supporting party, expects to turn back at the end of five more marches. Determined our latitude by observation on March 22, and again to-day, March 25. A copy of the observations and computations is herewith inclosed. Results of observations were as follows: Latitude at noon, March 25, 86 degrees 33 minutes north; distance made good in three marches, 50 minutes of latitude, an average of 16 2-3 nautical miles per march. The weather is fine, going good, and improving each day.

Borup Found It Great Sport.

Meanwhile the Roosevelt was traveling leisurely toward Sydney, the vessel's slow beating engine driving her along at about a five-knot gait. Commander Peary having gone to his cabin to drink a cup of tea with his family, the correspondents had time to look around. The crew is made up of the hardiest looking chaps that ever braved the frozen North, and most of them return enthusiastic about the arctic generally, especially young Borup.

"There has been much talk," he said, "about the frozen North, the monotony of the arctic, and so on. Don't you believe anything about the monotony. There is something doing all the time, and going up there is great sport. I would go again to-night if I could get the chance. But now I suppose I will have to go back and try to get my old job again. I was in the Altoona shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad when this opportunity came to go with Commander Peary. As soon as I got the word I chucked the job and started north. And now that I know what it is I had rather be there than in Altoona.

Walrus Heart Fine Eating.

"You can talk about your planked steak, but walrus heart is the best eating I ever struck. You bake it and it tastes great. The Eskimo eats it raw. He takes a big chunk in his mouth and then with a hunting knife he slashes the meat off at his lips. In my party I had three Eskimos. They were Koo Itiwah, Awitingwah, and [illegible]. We used to call the [illegible] He was a great shot. The Eskimo wants to be killing something all the time. If he spots a muskox or anything else he will take a shot at him. I used to tell them they would kill off all the game, but they would always say: 'No, no, plenty more.'

"MacMillan and I went in swimming one day when the water was 20 above. Mac had just been taking a hot bath, and he wanted to cool off, and I went in. There was a place in the water about twenty-five feet wide, and we dived in. Our bodies were so cold that we couldn't feel the cold of the ice in the water. It was snowing at the time. We had chucked our slippers over on the ice, and we did not need to put them on, for we couldn't feel the cold."

Eskimo Skepticism: Red Snow.

Speaking of life and customs of the Eskimos, Prof. MacMillan said that white men had to use much caution in speaking to the natives, as they were unable to conceive of much outside of their own world, and would not believe much of anything that was told them.

"Once," MacMillan said, "I drew a rough sketch of a three-story building and showed our Eskimos what large igloos the white men had. With a smile the Eskimo turned to his companion and remarked in his lingo: 'Ablysh-Isad-ulod-ax-la-tee,' which means in English, 'White men lie like bad spirit.'"

According to Dr. Goodsell, that rare sight, red snow, is quite plentiful in the vicinity of the Cape York region, staining the surface a red or crimson color.

"This color of snow," the doctor said, "occurs in extensive patches, but we did not observe any further north than Cape York. The clor is due to the protococcus nivalis, which occurs in small gelatinous masses, ranging in size from that of a pin head to that of a flax seed. They are rounded or ovid in area, three or four times the diameter of a red blood corpuscle. The protococcus nivalis is one of the very lowest types of living single protoplasmic cell, existing on the scant nourishment that the ice and snow provide.

Roosevelt Approaches Port.

Still steadily crunching on her way the Roosevelt drew near North Sydney and soon rode into a flotilla of welcoming craft, which ranged all the way from the palatial Sheelah to the smallest of buzzing motor craft. Each displayed every bit of bunting it owned, and some had finery borrowed for the occasion. Such craft as were provided with whistles kept them blowing and screeching until it seemed that the racket would never end. Out of the tossing and screeching turmoil buzzed a motor launch, which ran alongside the Roosevelt. Mr. Kehl, the American Consul at the port of Sydney, climbed on board and was welcomed by Commander Peary. In turn the Consul welcomed the Commander.

Then the town of Sydney came into view, the place fairly smothered in waving flags and its water front black with waiting throngs. These held their peace until the Roosevelt was well within range and then they lifted their voices to the utmost. Capt. Bartlett brought his vessel alongside one of the groaning piers, and as soon as lines had been made fast the Peary party debarked.

POPULAR ON THE OSCAR II.

Cook's Fellow-Passengers Say He Impressed Them as Sincere.

Passengers disembarking yesterday from the Oscar II. had nothing but praise for Dr. Cook, who, they said, impressed them as being sincere and entitled to the credit he claims as the discoverer of the north pole.

From the day that Dr. Cook arrived at Christiansand to take passage on the steamer, he was an object of interest to all the passengers. Soon after the vessel sailed, the explorer found himself the centre of an admiring throng. The passengers say he was most democratic during the entire trip, and that he accepted modestly the attentions heaped upon him. Fêtes were held almost nightly, and on more than one occasion Dr. Cook, with the aid of a map, discoursed upon his trip to the north.

The passengers gave Dr. Cook a dinner on Thursday night, and he made a short address. Capt. Hempel, commander of the Oscar II., as toastmaster, declared he was proud to have Dr. Cook on his ship.

"It is a great honor that the Danish people have had the opportunity of meeting this distinguished explorer first after his discovery of the pole, and that we were able to acknowledge his achievement,' the skipper said.

Benjamin Trueblood of Boston in a speech referred to the contention over Dr. Cook's claim as the discoverer of the pole, saying:

"I am impressed with the honesty of expression and the conduct of Dr. Cook. I would give my right hand in the belief that Cook would not tell a lie."

This appreciation was greeted with applause.

THE MOUNT McKINLEY INQUIRY.

Cook Adherents Declare They Did Not Hire Tacoma Lawyer.

Authentic information as to what lay behind the facts stated in a dispatch from Tacoma to the effect that J. A. Ashton, a lawyer of that city, had been retained by a New York law firm to investigate the alleged climb of Mount McKinley by Dr. Cook, was unobtainable last night. No member of the Peary Arctic Club could be reached and Dr. Cook refused to be interviewed.

The best information obtainable was the belief on the part of Dr. Cook's friends that, if such steps were being taken, they were on behalf of friends of Commander Peary.

"You can say for me positively," said Capt. B. S. Osbon, Secretary of the Arctic Club of America, "that we have nothing to do with it. I know nothing of such a movement. The natural supposition is that either friends of Dr. Cook or of Commander Peary are conducting it.

"Personally, and not as Secretary of the club, I am of the opinion, though he has not stated it to me in so many words, that on the top of Mount McKinley will be found a cairn built there by the hands of Dr. Cook."

LECTURE OFFERS FOR COOK.

The Shuberts and William Morris Submit Proposals to Explorer.

A representative of the Shuberts yesterday submitted a proposal to Dr. Cook for two lectures to be delivered at the Hippodrome. He offered $10,000 for a matinée and eevning appearance. Dr. Cook promised to take the offer under consideration.

Another agent, representing the William Morris Company, made an offer to the explorer to take a short circuit trip, giving lectures. The price suggested was not mentioned. Dr. Cook declared to this agent that he would not make any definite plans until later in the week, and that if he accepted the offer he would communicate with the Morris Company.

DENY ANTI-JEWISH RIOTS.

Report That Twenty Were Slain in Kiev Untrue, Say Russian Officials.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—A special dispatch received here from Kiev, Russia, says that anti-Jewish rioting broke out in that city to-day and that as a result twenty persons have been killed and several hundred injured, many fatally.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 21.—The report that anti-Jewish riots have occurred at Kiev is officially denied at the Chancellory of Premier Stolypin. The official news bureau to-night, in response to a direct query, received from its correspondent in Kiev a message reading:

"No riot has occurred here."

It is thought that the report is based on an incident which occurred at Slobodka, a suburb of Kiev, on Sept. 7. A band of fifteen members of the Reactionary League appeared on the streets of Slobodka on that date and fell on the promenading Jews with cries of "here is equality for you," and began to beat them. Police quickly appeared and the Reactionaries fled. There were no fatalities.

Our Hotels Best, R. H. Haan Says.

R. H. Haan, proprietor of the Hotel St. Regis, returned yesterday from Europe, saying he had not been abroad to learn about hotels because there was nothing new to learn there. The managers of the European hotels had been coming here to learn the last two years. This was noticeable, Mr. Haan said, by the recent improvements in the hotels on the other side.

Papers found on the body indicated that it was that of Tice, who was recently honorably discharged from the service. The papers were signed by Capt. William F. Cowles, the commander of the Connecticut.

CITY FEELS ONRUSH OF FULTON VISITORS

Hotels Filling Up and Transportation Companies Taxed to Handle the Business.

GREAT INTEREST IN FLEETS

Thousands Curious to See the Monster British Warships—Police Plans for Handling the Crowds.

New York is getting enthusiastic over the Hudson-Fulton Celebration. The fact was commented on many times yesterday, as almost a new sensation for this big town. So many things were happening hourly, even momentarily, that it is beginning to get on the city's nerves.

Preparations for the celebration were rushing on every hand. Buildings ordinarily sombre and gray, budded out with gay bunting and festoons of light; the hotels were filling up with guests, the streets with strangers, sightseeing and shopping, and the stations and ferryboats could hardly contain the first onrush of visitors. Most of the railroads were forced to increase their train service into the city a day before they expected to, while the baggage and express companies got a touch of the coming business which taxed their ordinary facilities.

Interest in the approach of the British squadron and the Atlantic fleet was evident. The public had expected the ships to arrive yesterday afternoon, and thousands eager to get a glimpse of the great British fighters under Admiral Seymour hung around the Battery all the afternoon.

The French, Dutch, and Mexican vessels are already at their anchorage off Riverside Park. The cruiser Morales, representing President Diaz's Government, steamed in yesterday, and received a noisy welcome from Governors Island and from the French and Dutch ships.

Great progress was made yesterday on the erection of the reviewing stands along the route of the land parades. The experience of many persons proved that it will be impossible for the general public to get good seats for the parades under $9 or $10 for the three days unless one is a member of some one of the patriotic societies which have built stands along Central Park. The price of seats on nearly all private stands ranges from $3 to $15 apiece for each day.

Police Commissioner Baker has practically completed his plans for handling the crowds and protecting the public during the celebration. He issued a letter to each of his commanding officers which is to be read to all policemen, cautioning them to do their whole duty and to be polite and attentive to strangers. Mr. Baker expects that the crowds will be the greatest ever seen in the city.

As a result of a conference between Commissioner Baker and the city Magistrates an understanding has been reached which contemplates the holding of all crooks arrested until after the celebration, and the sweeping from the parks of all loiterers without business there. Squads of detectives rounded up a number of panhandlers last night, and the Magistrate in the Night Court warned all of them that if taken again they would be sent to the workhouse.

To-night will bring the first social function preceding the celebration when the Netherlands Society will give a dinner to the representatives of the Holland Government at the Waldorf-Astoria.

NOTABLE GUESTS AT HOTELS.

Big Hostelries Are Crowded Already—Special Features Provided.

The New York hotels are already full to overflowing with guests for the Hudson-Fulton Celebration. Nearly two weeks ago it was practically impossible to book accommodations at any of the first-class hostelries, and now the managers are sending hundreds of polite declinations to those who have written tardy requests for rooms. The hotels have taken care of notable visitors from abroad and their own regular patrons as far as possible. Others have had to make shift for accommodations. In some of the hotels cots have been put up to make room for extra numbers, the capacity in the cases of some hotels having been almost doubled.

The notable people who are to help celebrate have already begun to arrive. The St. Regis yesterday was gay with men in the uniforms of the French Navy, and in some other hotel corridors it was almost impossible to hear a word of English. To-morrow still more of the foreign and out-of-town celebrities will come, and by Friday they will nearly all be here. Guests are arriving from every State in the Union, from South and Central America, from Europe, and even from Siam and other Asiatic countries.

At the Knickerbocker.

The Hotel Knickerbocker, which will be crowded up to its capacity of 500, has made unusual preparations to entertain the visitors. The chef has made representations in candy of many celebrated ships, from the Half Moon and the Clermont up to the Mauretania. There are thirty-nine of the Clermont alone. These miniature vessels will be placed on the tables in the dining rooms and illuminated. Among the guests expected at the Knickerbocker for the celebration are:

Signor Don Ignacio Calderon, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Bolivia.

Consul General José Aguirre-Acha of Bolivia.

Felipe Pardo, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Peru.

Doctor Luis Lago, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Honduras.

Alan D. Clephane, special delegate from Honduras, (Consul at Washington.)

C. C. Arosemena, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Panama.

Señor Don Pedro Gonzales.

Señor Dr. Don Rodolfo Espinosa, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Nicaragua.

These members of the New York-Lake Champlain Tercentenary Commission:

Senator H. Wallace Knapp, Assemblyman James Shea, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Booth, Louis C. Lafontaine, Senator Henry W. Hill and Mrs. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Riley, Assemblyman W. R. Weaver; J. C. du Pont and family, Wilmington, Del.; John Hunter, City Engineer, St. Louis; Hugh McGowan and family, from Cincinnati; G. H. Edgar of Boston, Samuel Moody, the Pittsburg manufacturer, and Gen. J. W. Kiefer, United States Senator from St. Louis.

Andreas Dippel, the Administrative Manager of the Metropolitan Opera House; Miss Geraldine Farrar, Mme. Tetrazzini, and Messrs. Scotti and Caruso will all arrive at the Knickerbocker in time to see some of the celebration.

ALTMAN BACK FROM EUROPE.

Tells About His Four New Art Treasures and Their Exhibition.

Benjamin Altman, the dry goods merchant, returned yesterday from Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. after purchasing, as told in THE TIMES cable dispatches, four masterpieces of the Maurice Kann collection from Duveen Brothers for a sum exceeding $1,000,000. These pictures will be exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum of Art at the beginning of the Hudson-Fulton Celebration. They are paintings of the Dutch school.

"I left New York rather hurriedly before the plans for the Hudson-Fulton Celebration had been shown to me," said Mr. Altman aboard the liner, "and I had no time to do my share. I was anxious to show my appreciation of the Dutch in honor of the event, and I saw these pictures at Duveen's and decided to buy them and bring them over."

The four pictures are Rembrandt's "Portrait of Oscar Haring," "The Man with the Magnifying Glass," and its pendant, "The Glorious Woman with a Red Pink." The fourth is Ruysdael's "Cornfields."

SMITH TEARS DOWN PATRIOTS' STANDS

Forestalls Writ of Injunction by a Raid at Four o'Clock in the Morning.

WHERE TO SEE THE PARADES

Miles of Seats Along Route at Prices Ranging from $2 to $10—Rooms in Hotels at $25 to $100.

In the long line of grand stands for the Hudson-Fulton land parades stretching along the edge of Central Park from Fifth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street to 110th Street and Central Park West there is a big gap which represents the spot where the New York Society of the Order of Founders and Patriots of America was to have reviewed the pageants. The society held a permit for stands in Central Park West between Seventy-first and Seventy-third Streets, and its stands were already built.

But the stands are no longer there, and the Founders and Patriots will now have to see the parades as best they can. Park Commissioner Smith, with a big force of men, tore down the stands before daylight yesterday morning. A court order restraining the Park Commissioner pending argument as to why an injunction should not issue against his tearing down the stands of the order was obtained by the society's lawyers on Monday, but it was not served on Commissioner Smith until late yesterday morning, and by that time the stands were no more.

The Park Commissioner's force, armed with axes, hammers, and saws, attacked the stands vigorously from 4 until 7 o'clock in the morning, and when they had finished not a board was left standing of what had been one of the best-built sections of all the stands. The thousands of feet of lumber used by Contractor Mark L. Stone were dumped in a big pile on a storage lot.

The trouble began because the Patriots turned over 1,200 tickets to Contractor Stone to reimburse him for the cost of building the stands. The contractor began selling these tickets to speculators, it is said, and the Park Commissioner learned of it and gave the society forty-eight hours to take down the stands. The time expired at 11 o'clock on Monday night.

The court order intended to restrain Commissioner Smith was granted by Justice Amend of the Supreme Court on a motion of Amasa Thornton, counsel for the Patriots. It set forth that the order would lose heavily if Commissioner Smith were permitted to tear down the stands, as he threatened to do. Five hundred seats had been reserved by the Patriots' society for its members, it was stated.

Commissioner Smith said that an object lesson had been given which would have its effect on all organizations which may have hoped to gain by the sale of stand tickets to speculators.

The Commissioner said that he had received no other complaints so far that persons had been charged exorbitant prices for stand seats. He said that if he should hear any more such complaints he would investigate, and if charges were proved he would revoke the permit for any stands involved and have them torn down.

Building Stands for 500,000.

The sound of hammer and saw and the clatter of lumber drowned out most of the other noises along the six miles of city streets yesterday where the three land pageants of the Hudson-Fulton Celebration will wend their way. Seats for nearly half a million persons are being built. Long lines of grand stands spanning the whole length of a city block have already been completed, and many others are at the finishing touches. Thousands of carpenters were at work all day yesterday and even into the night. The sale of tickets for those stands is going on merrily. Along Fifth Avenue, from Fourth to Fifty-ninth Street, hundreds of stands are being erected in which the public may sit for prices ranging all the way from $5 to $15 for a single parade. Ten dollars is probably an average price. Along the east side of Central Park West, where the stands are built on park property, it is necessary for the purchasers of tickets to be members of the societies, patriotic orders, or other organizations or city departments, unless indeed they are fortunate enough to be friends of an Alderman, the Aldermen having monopolized four blocks between Sixty-second and Sixty-sixth Streets, on Central Park West. These four stands will seat about 8,000, while the Aldermen and their immediate families do not number more than about 500. But along part of Fifty-ninth Street and the three miles of Fifth Avenue, between Fifty-ninth and Fourth Streets, the general public can buy seats for the land parades. In front of hotels, private dwellings, stores, and on vacant lots and from the windows of buildings which line both sides of the street either seats or chair space can be bought. Even along Central Park West there are stands built on private property, seats on which are selling for as low as $1 for each of the parades, or $3 for all three. This price, however, is very exceptional.

Fifth Avenue Sidewalks Free.

Far more persons will witness the parades standing up than will have seats, for the pavements on Fifth Avenue will be free for the crowds, as stands may not project beyond the stoop line. The south side of Fifty-ninth Street will also be partially free of staging, and along the west side of Central Park West the stands may not project beyond the stoop line. Only along the east side of Central Park West will the crowds who cannot purchase seats be cut off from view of the parade, and even along the parkside there will be open spaces here and there where persons may stand.

It is estimated that 200,000 members of patriotic societies and their friends will occupy seats along the line of Central Park at an average cost of $4 a seat, entitling them to see all three street parades. Most of these stands are now complete, and yesterday there was a long, continuous procession of men and women along the line of stands inquiring the price of seats.

Tickets for stand seats of patriotic societies could be procured only from the Secretary or some other official of each organization, and the rule laid down by Commissioner Smith that no tickets be sold for more than a reasonable sum was apparently being rigidly observed along Central Park West and Fifty-ninth Street.

From Seventh Avenue to Fifth Avenue on the north side of Fifty-ninth Street is a solid line of stands, seating perhaps 50,000 persons. Few of these seats remain unsold. The Daughters of the Revolution, the Art Studio Club, the City History Club, the St. Nicholas Club, the Catholic Club, the Daughters of the Empire State, and others built these stands. Every seat in the stand built by the Daughters of the Empire State was sold even before the workmen began building. When a reporter inquired at the Daughters of the Revolution stand he was told that no one but members need apply. The same was true at the Catholic Club, where the reporter was told that club members could buy seats at $3 for each parade, or $10 for the three.

The Park Commissioner estimates the cost of a stand, with a capacity for 2,000, at about $1,500, exclusive of the cost of lighting and decorating, usher service, insurance, and other incidentals. Even if the stands cost $5,000 each to build and maintain, however, it would seem that the societies would make more than expenses by selling seats for $5 each. But the Park Commissioner said yesterday that the Sons of the American Revolution had informed him that the organization would lose about $1,000 to $1,500 on the celebration, in spite of the fact that it is charging $5 each for its seats.

The seats built for the Board of Aldermen are simple affairs, with seven rows of benches extending from the curb to a point ten feet from the Park wall. The Merchants' Association has a stand which runs from Sixty-sixth to Sixty-ninth Street, for which, it was said, the association was charging its members $2.50 each for tickets for all three parades.

Big Prices for Rooms in Hotels.

Park employes will not have to pay more than about $1 each for seats for the three parades. They are erecting their own stands and will have room for their families.

Most of the apartment houses along the west side of Central Park West are building small grand stands in front. The Majestic Hotel, at Seventy-second Street, has built a line of box stands across the front of the building. Each box seat is being sold for $10 and entitles the holder to view all three parades. Another private property stand on Central Park West is that of the First Church of Christ, Scientist at Ninety-seventh Street. These seats were on sale yesterday at prices of $1, $2, $3, and $5, entitling the holder to see one of the parades.

Along Fifth Avenue the highest prices are being charged by the big hotels. The Plaza is charging from $5 to $6 for grand stand seats for each parade. The St. Regis is charging $10 for one-day seats, and the Holland House a like price. The Buckingham is charging $15 for tickets for all three parades. Rooms in the hotels facing on Fifth Avenue are being engaged for parade days at prices ranging all the way from $25 to $100.

So far as could be learned yesterday a comparatively small number of seats have reached the hands of speculators as yet.

Plans have been filed for the following additional reviewing stands:

Central Park West, corner of Sixty-first Street, estate of Trenor Park; Fifty-ninth Street west of Fifth Avenue, City of New York; Central Park West, corner of Ninety-sixth Street, Scotch Presbyterian Church; 421 Fifth Avenue, W. Millbrook; 353 and 354 Central Park West, J. P. Cohen & Brother; 630 and 632 Fifth Avenue, John H. Friend; 425 Fifth Avenue, H. A. Siebrecht; Fifth Avenue, corner of Fifty-seventh Street, Harry Payne Whitney; Central Park West, north of Seventy-seventh Street, Department of Buildings; 479 Fifth Avenue, Rees & Rees; Central Park West, Eighty-ninth to Ninetieth Street, Cameron Post No. 79, G. A. R.; 516 Fifth Avenue, Frank A. Craven.

UNVEIL FULTON TABLET.

Ceremony at His Birthplace, Fulton House, Penn.—Stand Like Clermont.

LANCASTER, Penn., Sept. 21.—The Lancaster County Historical Society to-day unveiled a memorial to Robert Fulton in the little hamlet of Fulton House, the birthplace of the inventor, twenty miles south of this city. Among those in attendance were Gov. Stuart and ex-Gov. Pennypacker, both of whom made addresses.

The tablet was unveiled by Mrs. Alice Crary Sutcliffe of New York, a great-granddaughter of Fulton. The presentation speech was made by the Rev. George I. Browne of this city, and the acceptance by former Attorney General W. U. Hensel of Pennsylvania. In addition to Mrs. Sutcliffe ten other descendants of Fulton were present.

The exercises were continued in the afternoon, and during the luncheon hour there was an exhibit of Fulton relics consisting of manuscripts, drafts, mementos, &c.

The stand from which the speakers delivered their addresses was modeled to represent Fulton's first steamboat, the Clermont. It was profusely decorated with the National colors. Smoke issued from the stack, and from the stern floated a pennant bearing the name Clermont. The officers of the occasion and speakers were seated in the saloon, and upon being summoned to their respective parts of the programme passed up through the hatchway to the top of the cabin, upon which was erected the speakers' stand.

The tablet, which was designed by Miss Mary Magee of this city, is of bronze, about a foot high, and is in the shape of a shield. At the top there is a bas relief of the steamboat Clermont. Directly underneath is a scroll containing the words, "Clermont, Fulton, 1807." Upon the tablet is inscribed the following:

> Here, on Nov. 14, 1765, was born Robert Fulton, inventor, who, on the waters of the Hudson, Aug. 11, 1807, first successfully applied steam to the purpose of navigation. At this place he spent the first years of his life. Without a monument future generations would know him. Erected by the Lancaster County Historical Society at the centenary celebration of his achievement, September, 1909.

The occasion was made a general holiday. The schools were closed to permit the pupils to take part in the ceremonies.

CURTISS RETURNS FOR FLIGHTS HERE

America's Aviation Cup Winner at Rheims Greeted by Enthusiastic Friends.

JUBILEE PLANS ALL READY

Fine New Aeroplane to be Used in His Work for the Big Celebration.

Glenn H. Curtiss, American international cup winer at the recent Rheims aviation meet, returned yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. He arrived early in the morning and was greeted with all the enthusiasm that a dozen exuberant aeronauts could muster.

The slim, smooth-faced man who, in appearance, was the most unassuming person on the dock, surrounded by an admiring group, aroused the curious attention of the crowd on the pier, and when the friends of the passengers learned the identity of the man wearing the fuzzy French felt cap, they edged up nearer the aeronautic crowd to hear what Mr. Curtiss had to say of his victory. Mrs. Curtiss, who came down from Hammondsport the night before, was all smiles.

As soon as his limited amount of baggage was examined, Mr. Curtiss and his wife went to the Hotel Astor, and for the rest of the day the aviator was busy. First, he attended a meeting of the Aeronautics Committee of the Hudson-Fulton Commission for the purpose of smoothing out some of the kinks in his contracts for flying around New York during the celebration. Everything was finally adjusted satisfactorily, and when Mr. Curtiss returned to the hotel late in the evening he said he would be on hand to begin flights next Monday. He will leave for his home to-morrow, and L. D. Masson, who came down as the representative of the Hammondsport Citizens' Committee, said he would be met at the station by the village band, and escorted through the streets to his house, where a gold medal will be presented to him on behalf of his admiring townspeople.

Mr. Curtiss will return here on Saturday or Sunday. Meantime he will ship for his flights here a new machine just completed at his factory, a duplicate of the one used in his victorious flights abroad, except that it will be equipped with a four-cylinder instead of an eight-cylinder motor.

"My European machine is a typical racer," said Mr. Curtiss, "and the new machine will be more suitable for the flights around New York. The cup winning aeroplane will arrive here on Saturday on the French steamer Savoie and will be sent on to Hammondsport."

Regarding his contract with the Hudson-Fulton Commission, Mr. Curtiss said there had simply been some minor misunderstandings. He denied that he had promised to remain here until Oct 9, as he has made engagements for St. Louis and Chicago early in October. He consented to remain from next Monday till Oct. 2, and he agreed to attempt, if possible, a flight from Governors Island to Grant's Tomb and back, in addition to other flights as far as possible up the Hudson.

The conference was held at the office of James M. Beck, Chairman of the Aeronautics Committee, 55 Wall Street. Those present besides Mr. Beck and Mr. Curtiss were Peter Cooper Hewitt, William J. Hammer, Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin, William Berri, and Theodore P. Gilman.

Representatives from St. Louis, Chicago, Indianapolis, and other cities were waiting at the Hotel Astor to see Mr. Curtiss, and he spent a good part of the evening talking over the plans for his Western exhibitions.

"I enjoyed every minute of my trip abroad," he said. "The foreigners are good sportsmen, and I received lots of congratulations on my victory, but it was easy to see that they were sorry to have the cup come to America. I learned a lot about the flying game, however, and brought back some good ideas.

"I can truly say that the success and speed of my machine taught the French aviators something new concerning the abilities of the biplane. The Blériot and Latham monoplanes are very fast, but I believe the biplane possesses other advantages that make it a more efficient and practical flier. The problem of actual superiority, however, is not yet worked out, and both types will undoubtedly undergo material improvement in the next few years."

Mr. Curtiss said he had learned how dangerous it is to pass close to a flying machine in the air. The draught from the propeller will wreck any machine that does not keep its distance. The safest way is to pass as high in the air as possible.

"My machine behaved perfectly all the time," added Mr. Curtiss. "It was the only one of the competing machines that always landed close by the starting place. It never went so much as an inch beyond the official line."

Immediately after his victory, Mr. Curtiss said, he had several offers to buy his machine, but he preferred to bring it to America. It has been rented for the month of November to some Boston exhibitors for $4,000, with the privilege of buying it for an additional $4,000. Mr. Curtiss also declined contracts worth $15,000 for flights in Berlin and Frankfort to return to America.

Mr. Curtiss will be the guest of honor to-day at a luncheon given by the Aero Club of America at the Lawyers Club. E. H. Gary, President of the Automobile Club of America, who came over on the steamer with him, will be present. Baltimore will send seven delegates, including Mayor Mahool and Col. Joyce. The Aero Club of Washington will be represented by its Vice President, Charles J. Bell, and George Oakley Totten. President Dozier of the Aero Club of St. Louis and Daniel C. Nugent, who came on to arrange for Mr. Curtiss's flights in St. Louis during the municipal centennial there, early in October, will be present. After the luncheon Mr. Curtiss will go to Governors Island to look over the aviation grounds.

ROEDER FAILS TO FLY.

Inventor of Aero-Torpedo Says Some of His Patents Were Stolen.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 21.—It developed to-day that the reason there has been so much secrecy surrounding the construction of John Roeder's new airship, which is entered to take part in the Hudson-Fulton $10,000 contest for flying machines, known as the "Aero-Torpedo," on the White Plains Fair Grounds, is because some of the patents of the inventor were stolen. The new aeroplane has been constructed with improvements on the stolen patents, and these are being secretly guarded.

When an attempt was made to fly this afternoon the motor would not work properly, and the trial was postponed until to-morrow. The new craft is built like a torpedo, with a huge gasbag on the top, and looks like a huge fish. The motor is said to be capable of making sixty miles an hour.

The craft weighs 600 pounds and can carry a weight of 600 pounds. The gasoline tank holds sixteen gallons. In case of necessity for an abrupt descent the plane can be transformed into a parachute. The machine combines the features of a dirigible balloon and an aeroplane.

WILBUR WRIGHT GETS READY.

Rigging Up the Airship in Which He Will Make His Flights.

Wilbur Wright spent a busy day yesterday at his aeroplane shed on Governors Island. With the assistance of his chief mechanic, Charles F. Taylor, the machine with which he will make flights around New York during the Hudson-Fulton Celebration, was unpacked and partially assembled.

The big planes were put together, and by Friday Mr. Wright expects to be in readiness for some short preliminary trials, provided the weather conditions are favorable.

The big shed which is to house the Curtiss machine was completed, and it is expected that Mr. Curtiss's new machine will arrive at Governors Island from Hammondsport on Sunday. By the courtesy of the members of the Officers' Club on Governors Island both Mr. Wright and Mr. Curtiss will have the privileges of the club during their stay on the Island.

Red Bank Aeroplane in Short Flight.

Special to The New York Times.

RED BANK, N. J., Sept. 21.—Edward Meyers gave the Wabank, his new aeroplane, another trial this afternoon on the old Monmouth Park race track at Eatontown. There was a strong wind blowing from the east, but the machine, towed by an automobile, rose gracefully after running about eighty feet on the ground at a rate of about twelve miles an hour. The machine ascended gradually on an even keel, which position it maintained throughout. It rose forty-five feet, flew at a distance of 600 feet and glided to the earth under perfect control.

Home for People's Hospital.

Plans have been filed with Building Supt. Murphy for remodeling the old-fashioned four-story and basement dwelling at 208 Second Avenue into a home for the proposed People's Hospital, of which M. Greenbaum is President. The necessary improvements are to be made at a cost of $15,000, and will provide a dormitory on the main floor, wards and private rooms on the first, second, and third stories, and operating and sterilizing rooms and a laboratory on the top floor, and also a nurses' room.

GAYNOR ATTACKS PARTISAN FUSION

Says the Hundred Have Fallen Under Control of the Republican Machine.

HAVE NO RIGHT TO BAR HIM

And the Machinations in the Committee Won't Fool the People—Issues a Bitter Statement.

Supreme Court Justice William J. Gaynor issued this statement late last night, attacking the "so-called Committee of One Hundred," as controlled by "certain partisan persons":

"To the Public:

"The last Constitutional Convention of this State, that of 1894, made the following declaration: 'We seek to separate in large cities municipal elections from State and National elections, to the end that the business affairs of our great municipal corporations may be managed upon their own merits, uncontrolled by National and State politics'; and to that end, and to forever put an end to the influence of National and State politics and partisanship in city elections, the people of the State enacted in the new Constitution of that year that city elections should be held in years when there is no National or State election.

"A large number of the voters of the City of New York, following this constitutional provision, never suffer their National or State politics to influence them in voting at city elections. They declare that National and State politics, that the question of high or low tariff, or of the government of the Philippines, for instance, have nothing to do in any sane and fair mind with the government of the city. And yet look at recent events. A so-called committee of one hundred was formed several weeks ago. Its projectors gave out that it was to be wholly non-partisan, and a large number of honest men joined it on that basis.

"Its declared office was to select fit men for the city ticket, namely, for Mayor, Controller, and President of the Board of Aldermen, and recommend them to all parties alike for nomination. Instead of doing this certain partisan persons, having got control by the quiet appointment of committees while good men stayed at home, began to plot and breathe with the partisan leaders of one political machine, a machine which Gov. Hughes had to ignore, and which tried to beat him last year, and would have succeeded except for Democratic votes all over the State; and when all was ready, the combine resolved and gave out through the public press, in defiance of the said provision of the Constitution, and, as I am advised, of a section of the Penal Code also, that they would not nominate me or any one who would not first hold up his hand and give them a pledge that if they nominated him he would not permit the Democratic City Convention to indorse or nominate him also.

"No such exhibition of disgraceful partisanship has ever been seen, except once. A few years ago Mr. Grout was nominated for Controller by this very same bunch of self-styled non-partisans in recognition of the term he had faithfully served. When the Democratic convention met later, it also recognized that Mr. Grout deserved re-election, and indorsed and nominated him also. Thereupon the Republican Convention was straightway recalled together and the delegates were compelled, against their will, by these partisan leaders, who had up to that hour been masquerading as non-partisan, to put Mr. Grout off the ticket. Having selected him as fit, you would think they would be glad to have every one help elect him.

"The voters of New York are now witnessing the same exhibition. The same pretense is again being played before their face and eyes under the delusion that they are a pack of fools and to be deceived by it. But they will not be deceived. These so-called leaders, who should be called misleaders, are only deceiving themselves. Like the ostrich, they stick their heads in the sand and think they have concealed themselves when the broadest part of their bodies is still big with exposure. They cannot deceive the sane and intelligent men of New York, Republicans or Democrats, right before their face and eyes.

"It is said somewhere in Holy Writ: 'Surely in vain the net is spread in the sight of any bird.' I do not ask to be nominated, and hope I shall not be, but surely some one ought to get up and expose this sham and fraud which is now being enacted before all men in the great and intelligent City of New York.

"Engaged in it I see men who, between elections, are absolutely non-partisan in working with the scoundrels of all parties in the buying and selling of laws, the grabbing of public franchises, the levying of tribute and even blackmail on corporations and honest enterprises, and in spoliating the public treasury in a hundred ways. Out with them all! And may it be my fortune to stand with the splendid intelligence and integrity of the men of New York, Republicans and Democrats with whom I have worked shoulder to shoulder in the past in lifting government up and making it intelligent and decent, in now utterly destroying oppression, tyranny, lawlessness, extortion, and corruption in the government of the City of New York.

"These so-called non-partisans are now gathered around a table trying to divide up the offices of the city and boroughs among their followers, it being proposed where they cannot agree that they cast lots! Some who are of them would cast lots on the garments of the city, and they are the ones now shouting 'stop thief' the loudest of all. Some who are of them geed and hawed and controlled the last administration of the old City of Brooklyn, which was the most corrupt city administration ever seen hereabout, and wound up with the indictment and conviction of its principal officers.

"W. J. GAYNOR."

GAYNOR STILL IN FRONT.

Tammany Slate Shows No Change in the Mayoralty Situation.

There has been no change in the Mayoralty situation as far as Tammany Hall is concerned. The men heading the Tammany slate are Justices William J. Gaynor of Kings and Victor J. Dowling of New York. The hunt for good men willing to make running mates for Gaynor is as hot as ever. Once it was thought by Tammany Leader Murphy that one on the city ticket would be enough. A leader said yesterday at the Wigwam that there couldn't be too many good Irish Catholics to offset the effect of Gaynor.

Two new candidates for Controller were added to the list yesterday. One was John G. O'Keeffe, banker, who lives in Harlem and is a Trustee of Bellevue Hospital. Frank W. Smith, who has been Chief Bookkeeper in the Controller's office, is also seriously considered because of his long experience and faithful service to the city. There remains on the list George J. Gillespie, President of the United States Title Guaranty and Indemnity Company. Mr. Gillespie is a close friend of Daniel F. Cohalan, and is one of the Trustees of the Catholic Summer School.

The Municipal Democracy yesterday sent this note to the leaders of political organizations and the heads of bodies taking part in the fusion movement:

> The Municipal Democracy believes that the welfare of the City of New York can best be promoted by the selection of a candidate for Mayor upon whom all good citizens can unite. Of the candidates mentioned Justice William J. Gaynor most nearly approaches that ideal. The best interests of the city demand that his name be presented to the city convention of your party.
>
> It is needless to expatiate on the qualifications which entitle Justice Gaynor to such consideration. The facts are common property. If it would be of service in your deliberations, we would gladly wait upon you or any committee which may be selected, to explain the reasons why the action indicated should be taken. The surest way to gain the public confidence is to set the general welfare above partisan advantage.
>
> A copy of this letter has been sent to the Chairmen of the County Committees of the Democratic, Republican, and Independence League Parties, and to the various bodies represented in the fusion conference.

The note was signed by all the officers of the organization.

HEALTH BOARD NEEDS A HOME

Metz Wants Any One with a Suitable Building to Let Him Know.

Controller Metz sent out notice yesterday requesting any person having at his disposal a building suitable for housing the Health Department kindly to communicate with him. The department's request for an appropriation of $900,000 for new headquarters was referred by the Board of Estimate to the Controller for investigation, and he is not fully satisfied with the proposed location in Irving Place.

The present building at Fifty-fifth Street and Sixth Avenue has become much too small for the department, and a change has been under consideration for some time. Furthermore, the owners of the building, of which the city is simply the lessee, have recently raised the rent.

much as a crew on a ship debating which is port side and which is starboard. They are talking in circles and have made no progress. We are exactly where we were when we started. If typewritten statements and lists of candidates were good campaign material they'd have enough to blow Tammany Hall off the earth."

Mr. Harvier gave it as his opinion that Mr. Ivins had not been eliminated as a candidate by any means.

"He is the only available candidate," said Mr. Harvier. "He is the only man on the slate whom the people know anything about."

William A. Coakley, leader of the labor representatives on the Committee of One Hundred, went before the Hundred and spent half an hour extolling the strength of William J. Gaynor, Commissioner John H. Bensel, Jacob L. Cantor, and William B. Ellison as candidates. These were the independent Democrats whom the labor men suggested as acceptable to them.

Labor Men for Ellison or Cantor.

When the names of Mr. Ellison and Mr. Cantor were brought up the objection was raised that they were Tammany men. Mr. Coakley read a letter from Mr. Ellison to prove that he was an independent, and he said the record of Mr. Cantor, who was elected Borough President on the Low ticket, was enough to prove his independence.

If Justice Gaynor was nominated by the fusion movement Mr. Coakley said he would carry its cause to victory and make a good Mayor. Mr. Woodruff showed unusual interest in Commissioner Bensel of the Water Supply Board, and asked Mr. Coakley many questions about him.

"Well, what is the matter with Ivins?" asked Chairman Outerbridge.

Mr. Coakley said there was nothing except a provision in his Charter draft prohibiting city employes from being members of organizations. Mr. Coakley thought this militated not only against organized labor, but against the policemen and firemen who have secret benefit societies.

Stimson, Coakley said, was not known, nor was his attitude toward labor. Mr. Parsons replied that he knew his attitude on that subject perfectly, and that it was very friendly. Mr. Coakley raised virtually the same objection toward Congressman William S. Bennet, Charles S. Whitman, and Job Hedges. None of the Republican candidates would do.

This was during the afternoon. At the meeting of the full Fusion conference in the evening, Mr. Coakley sprung a resolution declaring in favor of fusion all along the line, and not only on the city ticket, as the Brooklyn Republicans proposed. Chairman Brenner of the Executive Committee on Kings earlier in the day declared that under no circumstances would the organization stand for fusion on borough or county offices in Kings, as they could carry the borough and the county themselves.

The resolution was laid on the table after there had been some discussion. The motion was made by Herbert Parsons, who explained that he and his organization were heartily in favor of complete fusion, but that he thought the matter should be left to the meeting to-night, when the Brooklyn delegates could be present. They were busy with their primaries yesterday.

After the meeting Mr. Woodruff was told of Mr. Brenner's statement.

"Well those are his views. I have not expressed mine," said Mr. Woodruff. "I shall do what I believe my constituents should want me to do."

The threat of a fight for Justice Gaynor in the Committee of One Hundred, came from Judson G. Wall of Brooklyn. Mr. Wall is a member of the Committee of One Hundred, and also of the Committee of Nine which placed Justice Gaynor before the people as a Mayoralty candidate.

To Make Fight for Gaynor.

"We intend to present Judge Gaynor's name to the committee at the meeting to-morrow," said Mr. Wall last night. "We will make a fight for him, too."

"How many Gaynor men are there on the committee?" Mr. Wall was asked.

"There are more than anybody suspects. He has more friends on the Committee of One Hundred than any other candidate."

Chairman Outerbridge of the Committee of One Hundred and the fusion Committee on Candidates said after the meeting of the full fusion conference last night, when asked if he thought the situation was clearing:

"It's clearing in this sense that there seems to be a strong desire for fusion. Of course, the making up of a ticket involves a lot of discussion and a lot of deliberation. You cannot consider one man alone, but must consider him in his relation to the entire ticket. We are certainly proceeding with the idea on the theory that there is to be co-fusion all along the line. We hope to have a full ticket for the Board of Estimate by to-morrow night, when the committees are to report."

TELLS OF LOANS TO COLER.

Desmond Dunne Says They Gave Him Not a Little Worry.

Desmond Dunne of Brooklyn, ex-Commissioner of Public Works, gave some interesting testimony yesterday before the Commissioners of Accounts at the Coler investigation. He said that in the Fall of 1906 he had indorsed a note for $23,000 for Mr. Coler drawn to the Brooklyn Bank.

"Why was the note not listed in the bank's loans?" asked Commissioner Mitchel.

"I don't know that it is not," replied the witness.

"Were you a Director of the bank at the time this loan was made?"

"No. I had resigned."

"Did you ever ask the Borough President to take up this note?"

"Very likely."

"Why?"

"If he didn't pay I would have to."

Mr. Dunne then said he believed the note had been paid subsequently. He added that he had extended credit to Mr. Coler on other occasions.

"How often?" asked the Commissioner.

"I lost count. It was a great many times."

Mr. Dunne was then questioned about the Coney Island Hippodrome Company and said he had "painful recollections" of the leasing of the land to the concern. He said that Elevator Inspector Langan, about whose operations at Coney Island a great deal has been brought out during the investigation, had personally applied for the lease and offered him a partnership in the company.

"Did he offer you any stock in the Friede-Globe Tower Company?" asked Mr. Mitchel.

"No. He knew better."

Dunne's former chauffeur was called later in the day and testified that one of his daily duties was to take the Public Works Commissioner's children to school in the departmental car. He also outlined various trips he had made with the Commissioner to the Garden City Hotel, Tarrytown, Great Neck, and Coney Island.

It is probable that the investigation will be brought to a close to-day or to-morrow.

New Bishop Consecrated.

In the presence of twelve Bishops and many other prominent members of the Catholic clergy, Mgr. George W. Mundelein was consecrated yesterday as Bishop of Loryma and Bishop Auxiliary of Brooklyn in the Roman Catholic Pro-Cathedral of St. James, Brooklyn. The attendance of members of the church was so great that hundreds were unable to get into the cathedral.

Women's Rich Evening Gowns—Paris and New York Models at Macy's Prices. 2d Fl.

The sun of fashion never smiled down on more enchanting Gowns. They floated over from Paris at the dawn of the season and are now shedding their rose and silvery lustre through the Suit department—gilding it with filmy radiance.

But the imported models do not monopolize all the grace. Many that were made in New York—adaptations, modifications, variations of the French-breed—claim equal honor and admiration. The materials include embroidered chiffon, delicate as the wing of a humming bird—satin with the starry sheens, crepe meteor vital as the pollen that powders the petals of a flower, crepe de chine, satin glace, laces and nets.

Gowns made of scintillating beaded net, frankly decollete—white, pink and light blue, $74.75.
Gowns made of crepe meteor, evening shades in sunrise tints, trimmed with jewels, $98.75.
Gowns made of turquoise-jewelled net over sparkling satin, handsomely draped skirts trimmed with heavy gold bands, $189.00.

GOV. JOHNSON DEAD; MINNESOTA MOURNS

Whole State Is United in Remarkable Tribute of Love of Dead Executive.

SUCCESSOR IS SWORN IN

Taft, Bryan, and Host of Others Deplore Passing of Man Who Rose from Poverty to Fame.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 21.—One of the most remarkable tributes ever paid to the memory of a public man in Minnesota was accorded the late Gov. Johnson to-day. From the hour that the Governor's death was first announced by tolling bells in Rochester all usual public activity was abandoned. All banks, stores, and offices were closed, and buildings were draped in black and purple crape.

Gov. Johnson's body was escorted from the hospital in Rochester to a special train for St. Paul by a throng of citizens from every walk of life. On the train were Mrs. Johnson, a few of her personal friends, State officers, and friends of the late Governor.

As the cortège passed down the street leading to the railway station, the escort lined up on either side with bared heads, and the hundreds of people around the station showed a like respect. Mayor Thompson had proclaimed it a day of public mourning. The Mayor and Councilmen acted as pall bearers.

School Children Mourn.

All the way along the route to St. Paul flags were at half-mast and buildings draped with crape. At Zombrota the entire population of the town seemed to be at the station. A large number of school children lined the platform, each provided with the National colors, which were pointed downward. There were similar scenes at other points along the route.

At St. Paul the train was met by detachments of all the local companies of the National Guard and an escort of police. In spite of a heavy downpour of rain the procession to the State Capitol, with the militia acting as escort, was witnessed by thousands of people.

At the Capitol the body was placed in the rotunda, where it will lie in state until to-morrow afternoon, guarded by four commissioned officers of the National Guard, four Sergeants, four Corporals, and four privates.

To-morrow afternoon the Rev. J. Lawlor, chaplain of the Governor's staff, will conduct services in the Capitol. Thursday the body will be taken to St. Peter, where final services will be held under Presbyterian auspices, with the Rev. R. E. Clarke in charge. Interment will be in the family cemetery at St. Peter, where Gov. Johnson is to be buried beside his mother. Honorary escorts will be State officers, the St. Paul Lodge of Elks, and the Knights of Pythias, who will accompany the special train to St. Peter.

Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, sent to Mrs. Johnson a telegram of condolence. Mr. Mack selected to attend the funeral a number of members of the National Committee. They are P. L. Hall, Nebraska; Roger C. Sullivan, Illinois; Moses E. Wetmore, Missouri; P. K. Ryan, Wisconsin, and Col. John Martin of Missouri, Sergeant at Arms of the committee.

Last Moments Peaceful.

Gov. Johnson died at 3:24 o'clock this morning at St. Mary's Hospital, Rochester, following an operation performed last Wednesday.

After battling against death for almost a week, Gov. Johnson's life had a peaceful ending. At his bedside when the end came were Mrs. Johnson, Miss Margaret Sullivan, her friend; Drs. W. J. and Charles H. Mayo, Dr. C. F. McNevin, Frank A. Day, the Governor's private secretary; Fred B. Lynch, Democratic National Committeeman, and the Misses Jannie and Schiller, the Governor's nurses.

The last thing Gov. Johnson did before lapsing into unconsciousness, an hour and a half before his death, was to take his wife affectionately by the hand and whisper: "Well, Nora, I made a good fight, but I guess I've got to go."

Then he pressed her hand gently to his cheek.

The widow is at the home of Miss Sullivan. Mrs. Johnson is reported to be bearing her sorrow with great fortitude. Telegrams of condolence by the hundreds are reaching her from all parts of the country.

Other Operations Performed.

Gov. Johnson was operated on twice before, first for the removal of ulcers of the stomach, and afterward for an abscess of the bowels. Both were acute, prolonged cases, and the Governor was in a serious condition each time. There were obstructions of the bowels in each instance, and during the second operation the appendix was removed.

After the second operation Gov. Johnson enjoyed fairly good health, but had attacks of indigestion, which later became serious. These came on with increasing frequency in the last two years.

The last operation was described by a surgeon who watched it as follows:

> The operation lasted two hours and ten minutes. The preliminary work disclosed a small deep-seated abscess pocket, which connected from the seat of the previous operation for the removal of the appendix to the small intestines. It required a difficult, serious, and somewhat prolonged operation to remove this fistula. There were also unusually numerous and difficult adhesions of the smaller intestines to one another and to the abdominal cavity.

Dr. W. J. Mayo stated that there were no traces of blood poisoning, and that the immediate cause of death was heart failure from exhaustion.

When the Governor had breathed his last Mrs. Johnson, who had been in almost hourly attendance at her husband's bedside and who had borne up bravely under the ordeal, collapsed.

CAREER OF GOV. JOHNSON.

Desperate Struggle in Early Life—A Remarkable Success in Politics.

John Albert Johnson, three times Governor of Minnesota, was born in St. Peter, Minn., on July 28, 1861. He was the son of Swedish immigrants, Gustave and Caroline Johnson. His father, a blacksmith, was shiftless and addicted to drink, and died in the almshouse, leaving the widow and six young children.

The mother took in washing to support the family, and insisted that her eldest son should go to the public schools of St. Peter. The burden, however, became too great for her, and at the age of 13 John left the school and got a job at $10 a month in a grocery store. He stayed about six months and then was employed at a soda water fountain in a local drug store.

He had acquired a taste for reading in his school days, and in his leisure moments always had a book in his hands. His employer noticed this and encouraged him in the pursuit of knowledge until he had become acquainted with all the books in the public library of St. Peter. He steadily progressed in his various tasks, and at the age of 25 he was a sober, industrious, respected citizen. He had practically supported the Johnson family, giving the other children schooling advantages he had lacked.

At this age he left the drug business, and for a short time was employed as timekeeper for a railway construction company. Presently, however, an editor was needed for The St. Peter Herald, and four local Democrats who controlled the paper thought Johnson was the man for the place. He had had no newspaper experience, but from the start was successful, his knowledge of human nature standing him in good stead. He was peaceable in spirit but never afraid to tell the truth. He kept himself informed about what the people in his town were doing, attended dances, joined the National Guard, in which he became a Captain; joined the Masons, sang in the church choir, and became Secretary of the Nicollet County Agricultural Association, whose fairs he managed.

First Success in Politics.

The St. Peter Herald continued under his management until 1898, when he first ran for office. He was elected as a Democratic State Senator from a strong Republican district. He had been a Republican in early years, but after studying the tariff question he voted for Grover Cleveland in 1892, and remained with the party. He won his first fight on the tariff issue, getting a large majority. After he had served four years, in 1902 he was defeated by a few votes for re-election.

He was soon at the front again. The Republican Party was split over corporation control between 1900 and 1904, and in the last year a bitter factional fight broke out. The Republican candidate for Governor in 1904 was denounced as a corporation man, and Johnson was nominated against him on a record of opposition to corporate abuses. Roosevelt for President on the Republican ticket got a plurality of 161,000 in Minnesota, but Johnson won the Governorship by 7,800 plurality. It was a great personal victory, and two years later he had a greater one, for with Roosevelt out of the way his plurality was 72,000.

Gov. Johnson was in favor of a State income tax and a State inheritance tax. He wanted extension of State control over electric railway lines and over telegraph and telephone companies. He was also for lower railway rates and for the full taxation of corporation property. He was always bitterly opposed to passes, and declared himself against them again and again. He inclined to municipal ownership, at one time saying: "Students of economics have proved conclusively that the service to the people is generally better and cheaper when supplied by the city direct than when supplied by private individuals under a chartered or corporation right." He was in favor of an advisory initiative and referendum.

One of the first things he did as Governor was to recommend a repeal of the fellow-servant law, which provided that a workingman could get no compensation for injury if an accident was due to the carelessness of the fellow-servant.

At the time he became Governor in 1904 insurance affairs in the State were in a bad way, but without causing a panic he brought about a complete reformation in the handling of this business. In his second term he forced through the Legislature the two-cent fare law.

Patronage Not Used for Power.

It was remarked on all sides that he discharged his executive duties ably and honestly and had become a statesman instead of a townsman. He chose the State officers carefully, retaining Republicans in the Department of Education after ascertaining that they had given satisfaction. When after a bitter fight the Legislature established a permanent Tax Commission, he greatly pleased both houses by his non-partisanship in the appointment of the members. His ability to choose the right man for the right place won him respect. He never used patronage in an attempt to influence the Legislature's work.

In his canvasses Johnson made a strong point against the interference of corporations in politics by refusing to accept any contributions from them. His campaign funds on his first two fights amounted to only $25,000. He made up for the lack of money, however, by stumping tours, which aroused tremendous enthusiasm and gained him the help of thousands of citizens, who carried on his work without thought of compensation.

A feature of his second term, which showed the calibre of the man, was his policy in the great strike in the Mesaba and other iron mines. Following the reign of terror they had created in Colorado, the Western Federation of Miners set out to teach a lesson to the employers in Minnesota. With Johnson, a man of the people, in the Governor's chair, it was evidently expected that the union would be free from active interference by the State authorities. At the first sign of violence, however, Gov. Johnson went personally to the seat of the trouble and firmly told the strikers that, while he sympathized with the efforts of the men to better their condition, he would use all the power of the State to preserve public order. The agitators were overawed, and through the intercession of the Governor the strike was soon ended.

A Rival of Bryan Last Year.

In the canvass for the Democratic Presidential nomination of last year Gov. Johnson was the strongest opponent of William J. Bryan. It was late in the fight, however, before the opponents of Bryanism decided to make the fight for him, because certain of his views tended toward Socialism. He would not enter the race until he was assured that an earnest effort would be made to defeat the Nebraskan. When he finally was induced to come out openly as a candidate he visited the East and South, and his speeches made a marked impression. It was too late, however, for the Bryan men had perfected their organization in the South and the conservative element could not overcome their advantage. As a result Bryan went to the Denver convention with an overwhelming majority of the delegates, and was nominated.

Bryan's treatment of Johnson from the time the Minnesotan was mentioned as a Presidential possibility, and the bitter, though vain, fight of the Bryan men to prevent his indorsement for the nomination by his own State had caused a decided coolness between the two, and it was believed that the Johnson adherents in the Northwest would cut the Bryan ticket. Bryan men made appeals to Johnson for help and finally he consented again to head the ticket in Minnesota, and besides made many speeches for Bryan outside of his State. He was again successful, this time with a plurality of 20,000, although his followers refused to support Bryan, and the State was carried by Taft by 85,822 plurality. It was the first time any man had been elected thrice to be Governor of Minnesota.

In National politics Gov. Johnson was in favor of the revision of the tariff. He was opposed to the National ownership of railroads. He was in favor of State Governments handling their affairs so that Federal intervention would not be necessary. The centralization of wealth he regarded as a National menace.

Appeal to West and South.

After the passage of the recent tariff bill Gov. Johnson made a speech in which he declared that the time had come for the West and South to unite to end the domination of our National politics by New England and the East. These views brought this protest from President Taft in his recent Boston speech:

> Occasionally one hears a note like that of Gov. Johnson denouncing the East and calling upon the West to organize in a sectional way against the East, because the East is deriving more benefit from the Governmental policy than the West and at the expense of the West. It is difficult for one to treat such an appeal seriously. In this country we are all in the same business boat, and the prosperity of one section adds to the prosperity of the other, and business disaster in one section is only the forerunner of business depression and disaster in another.
>
> I feel, therefore, as if I could speak with confidence in respect to the whole Nation, and as President of the United States may well lift up my voice to protest against any effort, by whomsoever made, to arouse section against section, and Americans against Americans.

Gov. Johnson was about six feet in height and walked with a stoop. He weighed about 180 pounds. His light-brown hair was brushed back from his high forehead, and he had large ears. His eyes were a deep blue and he had high cheek bones and a long nose. His face was covered with a mass of tiny lines. He was always very particular about his dress.

It was his personality that won him the votes. Those who heard him speak felt ever afterward that they knew the man and the principles for which he stood. As he grew his mind expanded, and he had a human interest and kindliness that made men love as well as admire him.

Before his first election to the Governorship he married Elenore Preston, an art teacher in a private school in St. Peter. She was her husband's chief helpmate and adviser. She and her husband were decidedly home-loving and despite the efforts of their friends never courted society to any extent. They have had several children.

TAFT FEELS LOSS DEEPLY.

In Message to Mrs. Johnson and Public Statement Expresses Sorrow.

LIMON, Col., Sept. 21.—President Taft to-day sent the following telegram:

> Mrs. J. A. Johnson, Rochester, Minn.:
>
> My heart goes out to you in sympathy in your present deep sorrow. Gov. Johnson was a National figure of great ability, and great capacity for usefulness to his country, as he had already demonstrated, and his loss will be felt far beyond the State that loved him so well. I sincerely hope that the fond remembrance in which he is and always will be held in Minnesota and elsewhere, and the record of his high and valued public service, may come as a boon to you in your sorrow and may in time lighten the burden you are now called upon to bear.
>
> W. H. TAFT.

The President also made the following statement:

> The death of Gov. Johnson is a great shock and fills me with personal sorrow and with a deep sympathy for the people of Minnesota, whose favorite son he certainly was. It has been my good fortune to have had the pleasantest personal relations with the Governor, and although we differed politically, we agreed on a great many subjects, as I had reason to know from personal conversations.
>
> He was a wonderful man. He added to a charming personality a frankness and common-sense that won over his natural political opponents, and he made an able, efficient, and most courageous public official. That a man of his parts and of his capacity for great public usefulness should be taken now at the age of 48 should be, and is, a source of National regret, for had Gov. Johnson lived his position in the State and country was such that he certainly would have been called upon to fill an important place and to assist in the progressive movements of which he was a consistent advocate.
>
> It was my great pleasure in Washington to meet not only the Governor, but his family, and my heart goes out to those bereft of a noble and loving husband and father.

EBERHART IS NOW GOVERNOR.

New Executive Sworn In—Is a Republican and a Former Minister.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 21.—Adolph O. Eberhart was sworn in as Governor of Minnesota to-day by Chief Justice Start of the Supreme Court.

According to the Constitution the Lieutenant Governor became Governor immediately following the death of Gov. Johnson. The installation of Gov. Eberhart was without ceremony.

Senator E. A. Smith of Minneapolis, who was President pro tem. of the State Senate, becomes Lieutenant Governor, but at his request the formalities of swearing him into office were postponed.

Mr. Eberhart is a Republican. He is a graduate student for the ministry from the Gustavus Adolphus College at St. Peter, Minn., the home of the Johnsons. He was born in Sweden thirty-eight years ago, and came to Minnesota when he was ten years old.

After a short experience in the pulpit he abandoned church work and took up the study of law in the office of Judge Gray of Mankato, Minn., where he lived up to the time of his choice for the Lieutenant Governorship of the State.

While in Mankato he adopted his present name. His former name was Olson, but he adopted the name of his wife.

Gov. Eberhart has been Clerk of the United States Circuit and District Courts, and at one time was United States Commissioner for the District of Minnesota. In 1903 he was elected to the State Senate, being re-elected in 1905. He was elected Lieutenant Governor in 1907 and again in 1908.

DEATH GRIEVES THE NATION.

Sorrow at Loss of Gov. Johnson Expressed by Many Persons.

News of Gov. Johnson's death was received everywhere with sorrow. Some of the appreciations of the dead Governor follow:

ALTON B. PARKER—We were most hopeful that Gov. Johnson might be spared for further useful public service, and at the end of it the enjoyment for a brief period, at least, of the grateful assurance of public appreciation. The wisdom we acknowledge but cannot fathom has willed that this cannot be. Yet, as we proffer our heartfelt sympathy, we tender also our fervent congratulations to the State that chose one so pre-eminently fitted for the honors and duties of high office and enjoyed so rich a reward in his conduct of the ship of State.

GOV. HUGHES—Gov. Johnson's life was one of the finest illustrations of American opportunity well used. He was a man of the highest character, and his administration of the office to which he was thrice elected commanded the confidence of the people. His career was so extraordinary that it deeply impressed the entire country, and he was universally admired and respected.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN, at Douglas, Ariz.—Gov. Johnson's career illustrates the possibilities of American citizenship, and his death is a great loss to our party and the country. His civic virtues won for him a host of admirers, and his personal qualities converted his admirers into friends.

JAMES J. HILL, at St. Paul, Minn.—The life work of Gov. Johnson and its results were not matters of accident. They were due to his perseverance and inborn ability.

NORMAN E. MACK, at Ridgefield, Conn.—Mr. Johnson had made his mark in the world of politics and in public life. He was the type of a strong man. The country has lost one of its leading citizens.

GOV. WEEKS, at Hartford, Conn.—Typifying the spirit of the new West, big-hearted, broad-minded, and of sterling integrity, Gov. Johnson was an able, conscientious executive, beloved in his own State and throughout the country.

GOV. MARSHALL, at Indianapolis.—Gov. Johnson started poor in purse but rich in character; he ended, humanly speaking, richer yet in character, because he was willing to give more to the world than he took from it. His life will be an inspiration to all the men and boys of America who believe that justice and mercy and charity cannot be disassociated from the affairs of Government.

FEDERAL JUDGE GEORGE GRAY, at Wilmington, Del.—The death of Gov. Johnson is a National calamity. He apparently had a great future before him, and the country had reason to expect a great deal of him.

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND, at St. Paul.—Rightly does Minnesota mourn the death of John Albert Johnson. Seldom has there arisen among her people a nobler and more fascinating type of the merchant citizenship. In his whole career he was the honor of American democracy.

GOV. FORT, at Trenton, N. J.—In his life Gov. Johnson was honored by all who knew him, and at his death he leaves a record worthy of emulation by every public official, and one that will be an inspiration to the youth of America.

COL. HENRY WATTERSON, at Paris—The Republic has undoubtedly lost a great American. Had he lived he could have discharged a great public duty in leading us toward the organization of an adequate and enlightened opposition, which the country very much needs.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont explains in Pearson's Magazine for October what women will do when they vote. She tells how men will certainly lead different lives. For one thing, there will be a law that will compel the publication of men's names after certain indiscretions (she takes issue with Dr. Parkhurst), another law will give to women some privileges which men seem to think peculiarly their own, and there will be other laws equally awful—for some men. This is the first definite statement by a distinguished suffragette of what women think their votes will do for the country. It is a notable article which no man can afford to miss.

There are other big stories in the same issue. James Creelman sends from Jerusalem a further description of the massacres in Asia Minor and their effect on Christianity. There is a complete explanation of the salary loan business, the most ingenious and relentless system of blackmail and extortion in our civilization. Another story tells the method behind the smoker's coupon—a story which will interest every man who uses tobacco. Dan Slattery tells how Bingham improved the New York Police Department, and E. Phillips Oppenheim begins a new novel. Oppenheim, in mystery and detective stories, is a class by himself, and this story is just about the best of his long string of successes. There are six other short stories.

TAFT DEFENDS TAX ON CORPORATIONS

Better, He Says, Than a Direct Income Levy, Which Puts a Premium on Perjury.

WHY THE BILL WAS PASSED

Done to Defeat Combination Favoring Income Measure — Pleads for Constitutional Amendment.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 21.—President Taft arrived in Denver this afternoon, and to-night, in the Denver Auditorium, where Mr. Bryan was nominated last year, faced a crowd of thousands that in its noisy welcome and continuing enthusiasm recalled some of the scenes of convention week.

President Taft, switching from his purpose to discuss the question of the conservation of natural resources in his Denver speech, elected to-night to take up the corporation tax passed as a part of the Payne Tariff bill and to defend it as against the proposition to impose a direct income tax, which he acknowledged seemed likely to pass the Senate when the corporation tax was devised as a compromise. He strongly urged that all the States should adopt the proposed amendment to the Constitution to make an income tax possible in time of need.

Mr. Taft was joined here to-day by the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ballinger, who will accompany him on a part of the trip through the Far Northwest. It is probable that the President desired a further conference with Mr. Ballinger, whose conduct of the Interior Department he recently upheld in a long letter called out by the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, before making a final exposition of the aims and objects of this Administration as to the conservation of resources.

Mr. Taft probably will not take up the subject now until he reaches Salt Lake City, where he spends Friday and Saturday, or he may wait until he arrives at Spokane, Wash., where at the Irrigation Congress the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy had its first public airing.

First for Inheritance Tax.

After a few preliminary remarks Mr. Taft touched briefly on the tariff, saying that while a revision had been deemed essential, there was also a deficit in the Treasury to be met. This partly will be met by a cut of $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 in the appropriations to be made by Congress and partly by an income from a new incorporation tax law. Mr. Taft said he had favored at first an inheritance tax, but the objection that the States had pre-empted that field had sufficient weight to defeat the proposition.

"A part of the Republicans and all of the Democrats of the Senate united in pressing for consideration a general income tax on individuals throughout the United States. The law was as near as it could be made to that income tax law which had once been considered by the Supreme Court some ten years ago, and which was held to be unconstitutional by a vote of 5 to 4. It was conceded that the tax would probably raise $150,000,000 to $200,000,000, which was far in excess of the needs of the Government if the Tariff bill was to retain its general form as proposed, and so produce revenues which should be reasonably expected.

"Our friends the Democrats, favored the income tax with a view to substituting it for the tariff as an income producing measure, thus minimizing the effect of the tariff in promoting the industries of the country. In other words, the passage of the Income Tax bill would have lent support probably to the proposition to have a tariff for revenue only, and would have interfered with the protective policy to which the Republican Party is pledged.

"One further objection to the income tax amendment was that it had been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, and to invoke a second decision upon that issue was to question the uniformity of the decisions of the Supreme Court and to drag the court into a political discussion which, whatever its decision, could not make for its standing as an impartial tribunal before the people. It indicated a diversity of view between Congress and the court—two co-ordinate branches—with reference to the constitutionality of the law, which it seemed unwise to perpetuate in a formal statute.

How an Income Tax Was Beaten.

"But the income tax amendment seemed quite likely to pass by vote of all the Democrats and a sufficient number of Republicans, therefore those who opposed the income tax amendment looked about to see if a compromise could not be found—a compromise which would satisfy enough Republicans favoring the income tax to prevent the passage of that amendment.

"Such a compromise was found in the present corporation tax, and also the joint resolution already referred to proposing an amendment of the Federal legislation of the States authorizing the General Government to impose an income tax without apportioning it as a direct tax, according to the population of the States.

"The provisions for the corporation tax in the bill exempt all corporations whose net income does not exceed $5,000. It is therefore in effect an income tax, that is, it taxes earnings actually made. It is a tax upon success and not failure.

"The most objectionable feature of a direct income tax is the premium upon perjury which it offers to those who are willing to conceal their income—a matter not at all difficult to do—and who thus subject to a much heavier proportionate burden those who are conscientious in making their returns, and who pay their tax as the law intended.

"So great was this evil in the levy of an income tax in England that when that tax was imposed directly upon individuals, as was proposed here in the so-called income tax amendment bill, it was found that the proceeds of the tax at 10 per cent. were less than the proceeds of an income tax of 5 per cent., imposed as our corporation tax is, not upon the individuals directly, 2but upon the income before it comes into their hands. This is a practical argument in favor of corporation income tax as against an individual income tax that is altogether unanswerable.

England's Way of Doing It.

"In England, after 100 years of experience, the income tax is levied in only exceptional instances on the individual directly. It is first levied on the declared dividends of corporations; secondly, on rents before they leave the hands of the tenants, and finally on the individual with respect to matters that are not covered by rents and corporate investments.

"Another distinction which is made in the English law, and which commends itself to every one with a sense of justice, is that the income tax on passive and permanent investments like the stocks and bonds in a corporation should be higher than on earned incomes; that is, incomes earned by the service of the individual as salary as a professional income.

"Earned incomes thus described are really the proceeds of an application of the capital of individuals, which is being consumed and will be entirely used up at the end of his professional life of twenty or thirty years, whereas the income from the corporate and business investments will continue permanently without regard to whether the owner lives or dies and will pass on by succession of law undiminished and without reducing the capital.

"This distinction justifies making a difference between a tax upon the income of corporations and that of individuals, where they earn their income by services, either by making the rate less or by not taking the earned incomes at all. The latter is the effect of the corporation tax.

"Another criticism of the corporation tax in the present bill is that only shares of stock incorporate enterprises are thus taxed, and that those who own bonds secured by mortgages upon the entire property or plant of the corporation do not pay any tax at all. This is true, and the defect was fully recognized by those who drafted the corporation tax.

"They would have been glad if possible to impose a tax upon the bondholders who are only less interested in the earnings and success of the corporations than are stockholders, but the difficulty of including them and of collecting from the corporation before the payment of interest on the bonds an income tax proportioned to a percentage of interest to be paid on the bonds was that Congress could not use a corporation to recoup itself in the payment of such a tax from the interest to be paid, because thus to impose a tax on the bondholders proportioned to the interest he received would be in violation of the Constitution as interpreted by the Supreme Court as an income tax not apportioned among the States.

His Position on Income Tax.

"Having said this much with respect to the corporation tax as it is, I want to say a few words in favor of the passage of the income tax amendment as proposed by Congress to the States. Assuming the Constitutional authority to have been given, I am opposed to a general individual income tax law except in times of great National stress. I am opposed to it because of the difficulty already alluded to, that it puts such premium on perjury as to have led other Governments to abandon that method of levying an income tax and of imposing the tax wherever possible on the sources of income in the hands of those who are not ultimately to pay it."

President Taft arrived in Denver at 2 o'clock this afternoon and was driven to the residence of Senator Hughes. He was met at an early hour at Limon by the Reception Committee from Denver. The engineer of the special on the run from Goodland, Kan., to Denver, was James Garrett, a Democratic member of the Colorado Legislature. Mr. Garrett had the big locomotive almost smothered in flags and bunting.

In addition to the stops at Goodland this morning, the President made two-minute speeches at Stratton, Flagler, and Linon. At Flagler the President congratulated the women of Colorado on having a voice in the affairs of the State and the right of suffrage.

The day's programme included a drive through the streets, which were gayly decorated with the Stars and Stripes. Through an arrangement made by Mayor Speer, thousands of flags had been distributed free to the people, that they might wave a patriotic salute to the President as he passed.

Senator Hughes gave a dinner in the President's honor, at which there were sixty-five other guests. At 4 o'clock this afternoon the President made an address from the steps of the Capitol. At the conclusion of the Auditorium meeting to-night President Taft returned to the Hughes home, where he spent the night.

To-morrow the President will be the guest of Thomas F. Walsh at the latter's Wolhurst country seat, fourteen miles from Denver. A breakfast in his honor, to which thirty-five citizens have been invited, and a reception are features of the programme. Gov. and Mrs. Shafroth will assist at the reception.

The President will then continue his journey westward through Colorado, stopping at Montrose to open officially the great Gunnison tunnel, an irrigation project of the Reclamation Service.

SOUTHERN STORM LOSS.

Five Dead at New Orleans, Two at Jackson—Property Damage Heavy.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 21.—Central last night in Mississippi and swinging northward at the rate of 200 miles a day, the hurricane which swept the Gulf Coast and left a trail of ruin through four States continues on its course with unabated fury.

Of the ruin that the storm has wrought no one can give an estimate. In New Orleans alone five persons are known to be dead. A million dollars will not repair the damage done to the city. It is said that to replace the plate glass alone will cost $100,000.

It is believed that the timber destruction in Mississippi will equal that of four years ago, when more than five million dollars worth of timber was felled.

From the Summer colonies on the Louisiana and Mississippi Gulf coast come tales of devastation and fears that many lives have been lost. The Summer tourists who own pleasure craft are wont to spend much time upon them, and it is possible that many have been lost. Biloxi is still isolated, and its fate is unknown.

Jackson, Miss., the capital of the State, is still cut off from the coast points. Two lives were lost there. The dome of the new Capitol was wrecked and the old Capitol was unroofed. The streets are a tangle of live wires, and the fallen trees and débris make the highways impassable.

At Vicksburg two vessels were sunk and a third was driven ashore. Their passengers were rescued. One vessel lies across the channel and has blocked navigation. From Mobile comes word that the steamer Pleasure Bay is missing. It is hoped that it has been driven ashore and its passengers have been saved. How many are on board is not known

SPANISH DRIVE OUT MOORS.

The Spaniards had ten men killed and seventy wounded.

DISMISS RICKARD FROM BELLEVUE

Assistant Superintendent Loses His Place After Many Years' Service.

HOSPITAL BILLS ALTERED

He Admits to the Trustees That He Ordered the Changes, but Saw No Wrong in It.

Michael J. Rickard, who went into Bellevue Hospital nearly forty years ago as a patient and remained to become Assistant Superintendent, was dismissed from his post yesterday by the Board of Trustees of Bellevue and Allied Hospitals.

The charge, to which he confessed, was that he ordered his subordinates to make changes in the bills for supplies to the hospital.

One of the things that counted heavily against the accused was that some of the merchants with whom he traded had destroyed their books after hearing of the approaching investigation, and this action was taken not without suggestion on his part, it was charged.

Most of the supplies for the hospitals are purchased on contract after competitive bidding, but $11,000 is now set aside annually to cover the purchase of fresh fruits and vegetables in open market. Bills that related to the supplies that had been contracted for had to tally with the prices set for them, and the quantity was held within specified limits.

Bills which represented that the articles purchased were fresh fruits, vegetables, and the like got by the various checking officers with comparatively little scrutiny because it was remembered that a good deal of latitude had been allowed in the purchase of these articles.

When the bills went into the hospital office for such supplies changes had to be made in them to insure their getting by the Hospital Superintendent, the Financial Committee of the Board of Trustees, and the various other checkers to be met with before the bills were finally paid and laid aside. Hence the bills that contained items for supplies not provided for were shoved into pigeonholes and typewritten bills were made out on which the forbidden articles and those not allowed were written down as fresh fruits or vegetables.

At yesterday's meeting Rickard contended that he had never done anything wrong in his life, and that he meant no wrong in the changes he had ordered made in the bills. The board then went into executive session and his dismissal was voted.

SAYS BREWERS TRIED BRIBERY

Senator Gebhardt of New Jersey Shows Photograph of Check Given Him.

Special to The New York Times.

CALIFON, N. J., Sept. 21.—In an effort to prove that the State Brewers' Association had attempted to buy him in a previous campaign, State Senator William C. Gebhardt, Democrat, who spoke at a political meeting at Califon Monday night, exhibited a photograph of a check for $500, made out to Judge Gottfried Krueger, its President, and which, he said, had been offered to him, with the request that he be "friendly to our association."

He said he had kept the check for six months, photographed it, and then returned it to its indorser.

Senator Gebhardt declared that during the campaign in question he had received a telegram calling him to Newark. When he got there the check was handed to him. The State Senator said he knew a fund of $25,000 might be raised if necessary, to defeat him, and asserted that during the last campaign, when he was a candidate for his present office, the word had been sent out to "defeat Gebhardt at any cost." Senator Gebhardt fought the so-called "interests" with vigor at the last session of the Legislature.

FATAL AUTO CRASH.

Chauffeur Killed and Eleven Hurt When Car Rams Wagon.

From out of the darkness enshrouding Ocean Parkway, Brooklyn, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, twoscore young men and women members of the Prospect Avenue Methodist Church, returning from a straw ride to Coney Island in two farm wagons, saw the headlights of an approaching automobile gleaming like two great eyes behind them. The lights were in the middle of the road, and were bearing down on the slow-plodding farm wagons with what in the darkness seemed like express speed. The wagons were far over to the side of the road, however, and it was not until the automobile was almost alongside the rearmost of the two wagons that a girl suddenly cried out: "Look! It's pointing right at us."

As the girl spoke the headlights of the auto veered around as though the driver had lost control of his car, and the big machine dashed directly at the last of the two wagons. In an instant it had smashed into the farm rig, and the cries of frightened women and men rose above the crashing and rending noise of steel and wood, and both automobile and farm wagon turned over on their sides, the wagon practically destroyed.

Two hours later, when the wreckage had been cleared away and the injured persons taken to the hospital, it was found that seven young men and five young women had been injured, and one man had lost his life. He was:

McANDREWS, JOHN, chauffeur, 141 Wyckoff Street.

The injured were:

CROOK, THOMAS, a policeman attached to the Adams Street Station, living at 298 Seventh Avenue; face and body cut; to Kings County Hospital.

DALTON, Miss MAY K., 417 Greenwood Avenue; bruises and contusions.

GREENE, BENJAMIN G., 381 East Second Street, Parkville; cuts and bruises.

HAGGERTY, William, her brother; cuts and bruises.

HENDERSON, HAZEL, 7 Henry Street; contusions on face, hands, and right knee.

HENDERSON, EDWARD, her brother; bruises and contusions.

HOGAN, EDWARD, Thirty-sixth Street and Thirteenth Avenue; cuts and bruises.

MOFFATT, BEVERLY, 178 East Fifth Street, Parkville; cuts and bruises.

SEAMAN, BLANCHE, 30 East Fifth Street, Parkville; contusions on face, body, and left eye; to Seney Hospital.

SULLIVAN, EDWARD, special policeman, 516 Seventeenth Street; fractured skull; will probably die; to Seney Hospital.

WEBSTER, FLORENCE, 1,302 Nostrand Avenue; cuts and bruises.

McAndrews, the chauffeur of the wrecked car, which belonged to W. H. Putnam, a retired merchant, of 70 Willow Street, died after he had been taken to the Kings County Hospital.

Train Wreck Kills Three.

PATTEE, N. H., Sept. 21.—Three men were killed early to-day when the Montreal express, bound from Montreal for Boston, crashed into the rear of the disabled Quebec express, from Quebec for Boston, about one mile and one-half from this station. The dead are:

Engineer JOHN P. CALLAHAN, Concord, N. H., of the Montreal Express.

Fireman GEORGE PARMENTER, Concord, of the Montreal Express.

Unknown tramp, riding on Montreal Express.

No passengers were injured.

That's what we call it, though it is quite as good an automobile or driving coat. It is distinctly a coat of many uses and very comfortable. We have built it on broad sweeping lines, and chose for it some heavy English fabrics peculiarly suitable in color and design. Double breasted, deep collar, extra length, rather large horn buttons.

THE ARTIST AND THE PENCIL.

When the artist uses a pencil, he must have the best. It is not a question of what it costs, but what it will do. If you go into studios, art schools, or architects' offices, where men do very particular work with a pencil, you will find one pencil an easy favorite. That pencil is L. and C. Hardtmuth's Koh-I-Noor. No other pencil will take its place for the best pencil work. The artist has learned that the seventeen varieties of Koh-I-Noor pencils will do any work that can be expected from a pencil, between the two extremes, very hard and very soft. The art worker also knows that every grade is uniform in quality and its working is the same year after year.

THE WORKER AND THE PENCIL.

In the city, in the office, and where pencils are used for business purposes, many men assume that any kind of a so-called cheap pencil will do for rough note-taking. They put up with bad work and annoying breakages, influenced by a sense of fancied economy. But—try the experiment. Pay the cost of a Koh-I-Noor, ten cents, and use it. You will find it is a nicer pencil to work, you will [illegible] You will not have to whittle away half the length of the wood casing before you get to the point of the Koh-I-Noor. As a matter of fact, you can use every inch of the Koh-I-Noor, and you will find it will outlast half a dozen other pencils.

PRESIDENTIAL BUSY-NESS.

We are a long way from William McKinley and his methods and temperament. We are even further from the habits of the Presidents who preceded him. And though it seems incredible, we have, under the brief rule of Mr. Taft, passed rather beyond anything that even Mr. Roosevelt accustomed us to in the matter of Presidential assumption of responsibility for pretty near the whole business of the whole country.

It is true that our new President during the first six months of his term had the extraordinary session of Congress on his hands, called expressly to redeem the pledges of the party—pledges made on his personal initiative and strong recommendation. It was natural, and, in a sense, unavoidable, that for this important task he should hold himself peculiarly accountable, and that he should hasten to render his account to the people as soon as practicable. But that chapter is but one of many which he plainly intends to present to the attention, we may say to the anxious and somewhat weary attention, of his fellow-citizens. Even while the tariff job was still unfinished, and at a point where the honest and decent fulfillment of the pledges of his party and himself was trembling in the balance, Mr. Taft sprung upon the country the twin projects of a tax on corporations, avowedly intended as the first step toward minute and comprehensive Federal inquisition and regulation of corporation business, and an income tax, requiring a Constitutional amendment. Here in the very dawning hours of his Administration, before he had had an opportunity to address a formal regular message to Congress, we have thrown upon the country a scheme of change more far reaching, more intimately affecting the affairs of all classes of the people than any accomplished, or even proposed during the seven crowded years of Mr. Roosevelt's incumbency. It is true that the Constitutional amendment authorizing an income tax and the tax on corporate business were, in effect, if not in intent, a diversion which saved Mr. Aldrich and "his men" from a damaging defeat. It is not exactly reassuring, however, that measures of such scope and portent can be made a mere incident in the campaign of the protected interests for control of the taxing power of the Government in the pursuit of their selfish ends.

When the President set out on his tour—covering a mileage that would take him half way around the globe—he did not confine himself to an explanation of his course during the extraordinary session, though that, adequately done, might easily have taken all his time. On the first occasion that he took for a formal and ordered address he lightly tossed to the country an unqualified approval of a plan for postal savings banks, a system wholly untried in this country or in any country having conditions at all like our own, a system fraught with the gravest possibilities of disturbance to established customs, a system known to all students to be quite needless in view of the strong and useful banks existing, and one explicitly condemned by the National organization of bankers. And Mr. Taft managed, in the discussion of this innovation, to reveal a view of the bonded obligations of the Government, of the relations of the Government to the popular interests involved in the present use of the bonds for banking, and of the intimate interdependence of the various parts of our complex financial system which evinces more courage than either knowledge or wisdom. Possibly if this should be brought to his attention, he would excuse himself on the ground that his proposition to establish postal savings banks was only an incident in a speech devoted to an apologia for his action in regard to the tariff, that it was necessarily tentative, and that when he comes really to study the matter he may modify his position. But this, again, would not be exactly reassuring.

At the next stand in his oratorical circuit Mr. Taft found no occasion for the moment to launch any suggestions for entirely novel legislation. He contented himself with bringing forward a number of amendments to existing laws, especially the Inter-State commerce law and the anti-trust law. With two exceptions, the amendments contemplate the extension of Federal authority and added intervention in the conduct of the business of the country. The most important is aimed at the right of one railway company to hold the stock of another and competing company, and another provides for a Government veto on the issue of stocks and bonds. It is the opinion of experienced railway operators that restrictions of this character tend powerfully to the concentration of actual ownership in a few hands, and on that ground it is not opposed by some of this class. That, however, is incidental. We desire for the present only to note one more extension of the scope of Mr. Taft's remarkable mental activity, one addition to the field he seems restlessly impelled to occupy, and, if possible, to work. It is announced that in his next speech he will take up the question of natural resources. And then?

DR. COOK.

If numbers, cordial greetings, acclamations, and enthusiasm can warm the cockles of a hardy explorer's heart at his home coming, Dr. Cook must have been a happy man when he came up the bay yesterday. Whatever doubts may have been cast upon his title as the discoverer of the pole, these welcoming throngs were evidence that the world was not all against him. His friends and many others to whom he is personally a stranger believe in him. The welcome they extended was becoming and appropriate to the distinction they insist he has won.

It is most unfortunate that the joy of his return and the glory of his achievement should be clouded by doubts. But Dr. Cook must see that he has brought this misfortune upon himself. The public was greatly puzzled by his earliest announcement that he had discovered the pole. It was of a most unusual nature. No other great discoverer ever announced his triumph in so strange a way. There was a paucity of detail, a total absence of those descriptions and recitals which every man would expect to find in such a narrative. Doubt was not removed, it was confirmed, rather, by a more critical examination of the report. Adverse criticism based upon the speed he had made over arctic ice prevailed for a time, but that lost its force when Peary's story of equal or even greater speed was told. There still remained the graver matter of the inadequacy of his equipment, and that still troubles many minds. Dr. Cook set out almost in secrecy. The public was not aware of his intention, it had no knowledge of the nature of his preparations in respect to supplies, instruments, and apparatus. Nobody knew that he was going in quest of the pole. Then when he suddenly proclaimed that he had reached the pole, and reached it with a single sledge and two Eskimos over hundreds of miles of dangerous ice-fields, the whole world wondered. It is not strange that wonder should ripen into incredulity when the world read of the abundant resources, careful organization, the numbers of men and dogs and sledges, and the supplies with which Peary fortified himself for the perilous journey. The incredible labors for which his large force barely sufficed had been performed by Cook with two Eskimos and one sled!

Dr. Cook has no right to complain that he has been unjustly criticised. He has withheld from the world the foundation facts upon which alone belief could have rested and justice have been accorded. "As said on several occasions, all the charges and expressions of disbelief are based on entire ignorance of the supplementary data which I possess," says Dr. Cook. "No one who has spoken or written on the subject in opposition to my claim knows all the facts with which such work of exploration is measured." Precisely. Why are the facts withheld? It is not satisfactory to be told that they are withheld because Dr. Cook at his convenience is to make them public in a book, or otherwise. That may be too late. Dr. Cook's reputation should be more precious to him than the fame or the emoluments of authorship. After the public has once made up its mind it will not readily unmake it on the tardy production of his facts.

The Doctor should remember, moreover, that the general public is quite incompetent to give final judgment on the sufficiency of his evidence. He must satisfy the minds of scientific men, or he will satisfy nobody. There is a mystery, there are curious contradictions about the record of his observations. He has been quoted as saying that they are accessible to all. They appear to be accessible to nobody. It is said that they will be deposited with somebody in Copenhagen. He tells us that they are in the keeping of Mr. Harry Whitney, who has gone calmly about his hunting concerns in the frozen north. Yet on these records all depends. He could bring back nothing else from the polar waste, and these he has not brought back. He must not blame the men of science and men who are not of science if they are amazed and incredulous at his singular procedures.

The world will cheerfully accord to Dr. Cook the honors due to the first man who has visited the pole if he can exhibit reasonably convincing evidence that he has been there. It has no wish to enter judgment against him. Its judgment is suspended, and undoubtedly the majority of men will hope that reparation will be made for its past errors of judgment and that his title will be established by proofs. Meanwhile, his friends could in no better way exhibit their loyalty than by urging upon him the necessity of the promptest possible putting forth of his detailed record of observations and of all other facts and evidence of a nature to support his assertion that he reached the pole.

PUT DOWN THE HOODLUMS.

Some hundreds of thousands of strangers will soon be within our gates. They come to observe a great festival and to avail themselves of this opportunity to see Greater New York at its best. But if an unruly element of its citizenship be not dealt with summarily, multitudes are bound to carry away with them impressions of this city at its worst.

New Yorkers are a long-suffering lot. Constant subjection to the inconveniences of crowds has trained them in a tolerance not warranted by the indignities lately heaped upon them. They have themselves turned against the hoodlums that threaten to possess the town. How will visitors unaccustomed to sights of rowdyism think and feel when they must not merely see but come in contact with its foul effects? Will they not shake off the dust of their feet against such an exhibition of civic hospitality?

The Magistrates can end this abuse. When one Magistrate sentenced a gang of hoodlums to the Workhouse a few Sundays ago the task of the police in suppressing their kind was for a week appreciably lessened. The Police Department will have its hands full in the coming days of celebration. It cannot cope with rowdyism rampant, unpunished, undeterred. The abominations that characterized the revelry at Coney Island last week must be sharply and sternly forbidden. The first few cases should be made exemplary, and to this end the people expect the Magistrates to do their duty.

THE SORE SPOT.

In his speech to the Adirondack farmers and sawmill men at Malone Mayor McClellan was pardonably complimentary to the political sagacity of the rural voter. We may doubt if country politics in New York State are quite so free from the taint of bossism as a few of the words spoken by Col. McClellan seem to imply. But that makes no difference. The Mayor put his finger directly on the sore spot in the body politic which causes municipal misrule here and elsewhere:

> The spirit of paternalism is stronger in the great centres of population than anywhere else in the community. The implements of Government are constantly present. In great cities many men are so occupied in the rush and worry and strife of existence that they have no time for anything else. If Government will relieve them from the trouble, worry, and responsibility of life, so much the better.

It is the greatest evil of modern city life, and a growing evil, that the citizen becomes less and less influential in the government of his city because his business activities, his pursuit of pleasure, and the spirit of irresponsibility, so common in great centres of population, divert his mind from the duties of citizenship. The ordinary citizen holds himself responsible for nothing that goes wrong in the rule of the city. He may vote, generally he does, and he may not infrequently vote with discretion. He may perform jury duty, if he cannot legally escape it. But beyond that he recognizes no duty and no responsibility. To "the Government" he vaguely ascribes all imperfections in municipal management, and he expects that "the Government" will provide cheap transportation for him, protect his property, and relieve him from all cares and worries except those pertaining to himself and his family.

This idea of a paternal Government is, of course, false to all American policies and traditions, but it seems more deeply seated in the sentiment of the American burgher than any principle set forth in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. Mayor McClellan has good reason to know all about it.

"WELFARE WORK."

It is the rich who have learned the lesson of thrift. The poor are improvident. Wealth is still extorted from the poor by taking advantage of their improvidence, as in the Payne tariff rates and by methods—themselves wasteful—that keep them in filth and ignorance. It is therefore of special interest that efforts are making by enlightened rich men and women to teach the masses thriftier and more comfortable ways of living, and to provide conditions therefor. Mrs. Sage's trustees have attempted this in the model homes for workmen that are being completed on Long Island. If their methods of housing and of village planning are really more economical and attractive in their results than those attained by the average building company they will soon be copied everywhere. For the more profitable plan is invariably adopted by all when once demonstrated. The Sage model homes may therefore transform the housing arrangements of millions.

In an undertaking headed by Miss Anne Morgan, the woman's department of the National Civic Federation has just proved to the workmen in the Brooklyn Navy Yard that a restaurant, rightly administered, can be made to serve them with better food at less cost than they would have to pay elsewhere. Our neighbor The Tribune reports that since the first meal consumed in this restaurant last June nearly 19,000 meals have been served at an average cost of 12½ cents apiece, and that the restaurant has been wholly self-supporting. Dr. Lucy V. Bannister, who has kept its accounts, will soon resign to take charge of the medical and "welfare work" of the Westinghouse Lamp Company at Watsessing, N. J. This company is satisfied that the work will be profitable in keeping its employés contented and efficient. Now that the restaurant in Brooklyn has passed the experimental stage, it is practically settled that the Government will within the year amplify it according to the same principles and run it in the interest of its employés.

THE BLACK RACE SCOURGED.

The negro race has been coddled, therefore it is being scourged—worse than in slavery days. Slavery itself coddled the race, in that it kept its members healthy precisely as the domestic animals are kept healthy, without their volition. Under the paternalism of slavery the negro became a fine physical being. When that paternalism was abolished all external restraints were loosed, and, lacking in self-control, he has everywhere become the prey of passion and disease. This is the melancholy picture of the negro presented by Judge Harris Dickson in Hampton's Magazine for October. Basing his conclusions upon a statistical study of the race by Frederick L. Hoffman, Judge Dickson says:

> We will suppose that 1,000 white and 1,000 black children are born on the same day in Washington, D. C. Of those, 663 white children will reach 25 years, as against 401 negroes. The significance of this simple statement is appalling, as it affects the comparative economic value of the two races. It is a finger pointing to destruction.

Negroes die more than half again as fast as the whites. Those who live to perpetuate the race are a prey to loathsome diseases, which are bound further to weaken the succeeding generations. In all parts of the country the negro has left the farm and resorts in increasing numbers to the worst sections of the city, where vice and crime are prevalent. Sixteen Southern cities show white gains of 94 per cent., negro gains of 242 per cent. The civilized negro has lost his immunity to malaria and yellow fever, tropical diseases against which his ancestors were proof. Their habitat was the tropics; he languishes there more rapidly than the white man. In the North and in the South the inordinate mortality among negroes from tuberculosis is thus shown:

> We find that while 379 white men out of 100,000 in New York died of consumption, there were 845 negroes; 365 whites in Boston, against 884 negroes; 160 whites in St. Louis, against 606 negroes; 250 whites in New Orleans, against 587 negroes. A smaller disproportion is manifested in Philadelphia—269 whites to 532 negroes, practically twice as many.

The terrible operation of the law of survival is solving the negro problem. Those of the race who can be taught by its scourges will survive.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Discovered a New Disease.

Everybody knows more or less about the various "occupational diseases"—those which are produced by working with injurious materials or in the unsanitary conditions which, with or without—usually without—necessity, are incidental to certain trades. But there is, it seems, another occupational disease, as definite as any of the rest and with its own easily recognizable symptoms, which has not yet taken its place in the list of human ills, though it has, perhaps, more victims than any other in its class, and does as much as any to decrease the aggregate of health, happiness and efficiency.

This malady is the discovery of The New York Medical Journal, but after reading its description everybody will realize that, if not himself suffering from it to some extent—few of us are so fortunate as entirely to escape—he knows dozens of people who illustrate its serious ravages. The disease in question is still without a name, or has a hundred, which comes to the same thing, but its etiology is simple—it is caused by doing a life work for which one lacks fitness or liking. The physician, says The Medical Journal, will recognize patients who are thus affected, first by a dejected appearance and preoccupied air. Also—

> They speak quietly and in very even tones. They are depressed, neurasthenic, anæmic, or genuinely desolate. Their tissues are flabby, and have lost resiliency. These patients usually complain of symptoms pointing to diminished nutrition. And it is evident that the sufferer lacks some of the predominant forces of life—enthusiasm and hope.

The interesting question whether fitness for a particular kind of work always goes with a liking for it, and vice versa, is not raised by The Medical Journal, but it says that when confronted with such a case it is the physician's duty, and one which he can often successfully perform if he knows how, to cheer the patient and inspire him with some interest in his trade or profession. Tonic medicines have almost no effect, but frequently real mental or physical obstacles to success can be found and removed, and to do so is a great achievement.

Here, evidently, is a task for the trained psychotherapist who is also a doctor, for nobody can doubt, now that this addition to the occupational diseases has been described, that it really exists. Curiously enough, the discoverer does not mention among possible means of cure the turning to a more congenial form of activity than the one which produced it. That is not always easy, but it is at least simple.

Revealing Trade Secrets.

It will be more than a little surprising for most people to learn that of the watch movements imported into this country last year something over 850,000 were worth only 85 1-3 cents apiece. Americans do not have to be told, of course, that a watch, neatly cased and fairly trustworthy as a timekeeper, can be profitably sold in this country for not much more than that sum, but so accustomed have most of us been to seeing all the imported watches which came under our observation held at a much higher retail price that we will with difficulty refrain from wondering what we have been paying for those eighty-five-cent foreign watches—and why.

There is a hint, too, in this revelation that though really good watches can now be bought much more cheaply than ten or twenty years ago, the prices are still so high, considering their probable cost, that the profit on them is something more than "reasonable." The tariffmakers evidently didn't think so, since they raised the duties and gave the manufacturers still more protection from foreign competition, but tariffmakers have their own peculiar way of deciding such things, and its correctness is not to be lightly questioned by mere miserable consumers. Theirs but to pay and look pleasant, or, if they can't look pleasant, to look as pleasant as they can.

The consumers will be helped a little toward amiability of expression, perhaps, when they note that as one effect of the new tariff on watches the small retailer will not hereafter be able to sell as of "his own make," and therefore at a higher price, watches which he has merely imported—or merely had imported for him. If that were the worst effect of the revised law how easily it could be endured—by the purchasing public! That public has of late acquired quite a liking for knowing what it buys and for getting what it pays for, whether the object bought be a watch or canned meat. Unfortunately, it seems that the little deception as to "own make" watches can go on as before, provided only the dealer buys at home instead of abroad. Possibly the apparent reform was devised just to make him do so. Stranger things than that have happened.

A Threat from the South.

As much of the Hudson-Fulton Celebration's success depends upon having good weather for the various festivities and ceremonies, it is disquieting to learn that one of the worst rain and wind storms of the year is ravaging the States on and near the Gulf and is slowly making its obnoxious way in this direction.

Fortunately the movement, though slow, is still fast enough to make it probable that the big gale will have come and gone, if it come at all, before next Saturday. Even then we would not entirely escape, since all the decorations already in place will suffer cruelly from a drenching. There is good excuse for hoping, however, that the storm will either be dissipated before it gets here or pass to the right or left of us. The Weather Bureau as yet prophesies nothing worse than showers, and those would be endurable—as an alternative for a long, driving rain.

Should the latter come while we were trying to entertain a million visitors and ourselves—well, there would be no help for it, not even the knowledge that there is no such thing as a "line gale."

TO DEFEAT THE BOSSES.

Do as They Do and Capture the Caucus.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The gist of political and civic reform has not yet been publicly discovered. What a waste of time, energy, and money by reform committees, independent organizations, fusion movements, and all political pedagogy by the press and pulpit on a roundabout way of influencing the nominating function of the great parties, the only system for a full ticket. They are like the Chinese burning down a barn to get a roasted pig. For a great party there must be a convention, just as a great people must have a legislature. The political common sense of the American people has naturally evolved a system, almost or quite spontaneously. It is the caucus, primary, and convention. There is no use in wasting time in search for any other device. But the people themselves must apply this device. In our prosperity and luxury we have left it to a personal class with the results screeched about in all perennial reform and independent movements. So we go on year after year with a disgusting imbecility and regularity. We can, by a very simple, quick, and economical way, strike at the root of all political evil by simply doing as the bosses do—capture the caucuses. The bosses are wise and practical; the people are indolent and foolish. The State has adopted the system of election district caucus, primary, and convention, and there is no use in trying anything else. Popularize that system, and it will put to the first full test the experiment of popular government.

As a general rule the captains of the little neighborhood election districts are the foes to popular government and reform. To them the bosses pipe-line their orders. They are, for the most part, office holders held accountable with their heads for keeping in line with the "slate." Their proceeding is at the annual caucus, [to be held this week,] to have the whole ticket of delegations for the ensuing primary already made up and to make a mock appointment of a nominating committee already previously instructed and obedient. This gives the bosses their power through the conventions. All is done according to law and order. The trouble is that the substantial people are not at this little home district caucus, that requires only one hour a year. Now the quick trick of reform, that will cut the ground out from under the bosses, is for the people conscientiously, as a patriotic obligation, to go to the caucus and ballot for this nominating committee, as well as for all nominating committees in all conventions, instead of letting the machine appoint, which is the source of all mischief. As a general rule, with a few honorable exceptions, these captains are selected, or have derived their positions, for all the furtive and cunning tricks that selfish pursuits are capable of. Two dozen independent self-supporting citizens at each caucus can take this power out of the captains' hands and restore it to the wholesome people who are disinterested and public spirited. Let the war cry be, "Ballot for the nominating committee."

HENRY HUDSON'S FAMILY.

Genealogy of the Man Who Explored River Bearing His Name.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I feel sure that just at this juncture, when we are about to celebrate the 300th anniversary of Henry Hudson's entrance into, and voyage up, the noble river which bears his name, any information concerning the ancestry of the famous and intrepid navigator will be of interest.

It seems to be admitted by all authorities that he was a descendant of Henry Herdson, (also spelt Hudson,) Alderman and citizen of London, who is named in Queen Mary's famous charter to the Muscovy Company, dated Feb. 6, 1555, and who died in December, 1555, leaving eight sons and three daughters.

The Muscovy, or Russia, Company was formed for the purpose of discovering a northeast passage to the East. It was originally incorporated as the "Company of Merchant Adventurers" under a charter from Edward VI. Dec. 18, 1551, and Sebastian Cabot was elected Governor for life. The name of Henry Herdson does not appear in King Edward's charter, but in that of Queen Mary Feb. 6, 1555, where Sebastian Cabot is named as Governor; George Barnes, Knight, and Alderman; William Garrett, Alderman; Anthony Husie and John Suthcot are named as Consuls; Sir John Gresham, Knight; Sir Andrew Juddo, Knight; Sir Thomas White, Knight; Sir John Yorke, Knight; Thomas Offley, the elder; Thomas Lodge, Henry Herdson, [Hudson in the proceedings of the Court of Chancery,] John Hopkins, William Watson, [brother-in-law of Herdson,] William Clifton, Richard Pointer, Richard Chamberlaine, William Mallorie, Thomas Pallie, the elder; William Allen, Henry Becher, Geoffrey Walkenden, Richard Fowles, Rowland Heyward, George Eaton, John Ellot, John Sparks, Blase Sanders, and Miles Nording are named as the first twenty-four assistants. (Hakluyt, Vol. I., Pages 268-269.)

It is unfortunate that we know nothing further regarding this first Henry Hudson, or Herdson. He died in December, 1555, and was buried in the Church of St. Dunstan's in the East, London, on the 20th. His widow erected a monument to his memory, which is still to be seen there. He bore for arms, "Argent, a cross sable, between four fleur de lis, gules." (See Burke's General Armory, Page 481, second column, "Herdson.")

His will was proved, the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, in December, 1555. (See British Record Society Publications, Vol. X., 1893, Page 268.)

"1555. Herdson, Henry, of London, and Kingsdon County, Somerset, 28 More."

Henry Herdson married Barbara, daughter of —— Watson, of Lidington, County Bedford, probably a cadet branch of the Watsons of Amphill. She subsequently married Sir Richard Champion, Knight and Alderman; Lord Mayor of London, 1565-66. (See Visitation of London, 1568, Harleian Collection, Vol. I., Page 3.)

Lady Champion died in 1576. Will proved in Prerogative Court of Canterbury. (See British Record Society Publications, Vol. XVIII., 1898, Page 153.)

> 1576 — Herdson, afterward Champion, Barbara, widow of Sir Richard Champion, Knight and Alderman of London, St. Dunstan's in the East, London, formerly wife of Henrie Herdson. 28 Carew.

Henry Herdson had eight sons: Thomas, John, Edward, Edmund, George, William, Henry, and Christopher, and three daughters, Alice, wife of Sir George Barnes, Knight; Abigail, wife of George Dixwell, and Annie, wife of George Stoddard. Of Thomas hereafter. John, the second son, was a member of the Muscovy Company and of the Virginia Company, organized by Sir Walter Raleigh. He died unmarried, and his brother Thomas inherited his estate. Of the next four we have nothing to record. Of the seventh son, Henry, we find in Stow's Survey of London that he was a "citizen" in 1558-9.

Of the eighth and last son, Christopher, we find that he was an agent of the Muscovy Company in 1559-60, and there seems to be a strong probability that he was the father of Capt. Thomas Hudson of Limehouse, in the service of the Muscovy Company in 1579, and who in 1580 commanded the expedition to Persia.

Jan. 24, 1583, Capt. Hudson advised Capt. John Davis concerning his search for a northwest passage to China, and that our Henry Hudson was well acquainted with Capt. Thomas Hudson is well authenticated, and our Henry had access to his papers and made a careful study of them which resulted twenty-six years later in the voyage which carried him into Delaware Bay and the Hudson River in 1609. Capt. Hudson died in 1592; will proved 1592. See British Record Society Pub., Vol. 25, Page 225: "1592. Hudson, Thomas, Limehouse, Stebunketh, Middlesex, 38 Harrington."

We now come to Thomas Herdson; also Hudson, eldest son of Henry. He was a linen draper and a member of the Muscovy Company. His London residence was in the Park of St. Nicholas Acous, besides which he owned an estate at Mortlake in Surrey. He seems to have been an active participant in the affairs of the Muscovy Company and of the Virginia Company, organized by Raleigh, and was the heir-at-law of his brother John.

Now I come to the point at issue; was our Henry Hudson his son? Henry Hudson was born about the year 1570; now, which one of the sons of the first Henry was married about that time?

The answer to that question is Thomas, for we find in the marriage license book of the Bishop of London, Volume 25, of the Harleian Collection, Page 42:

> 1569, May 7. Thomas Herdeson of St. Nicholas Acou, Draper, and Katherine Whitehouse, spinster, of St. Peter's, Westcheap. Gen. Lic. [General Licenses.]

In the Register of St. Nicholas we find the births of three children:

> Page 89, Burials.—March, 25, 1571, Agnes [Annis] Herdson, daughter of Thomas Herdson. April 3, 1571, Barbara Herdson, daughter of Thomas Herdson.

Now if our Henry was the son of this Thomas he was probably born in February or March, 1570, but was not baptized at St. Nicholas. He may have been baptized either at Mortlake in Surrey or at St. Peter's, Eastcheap, London, his mother's church. The Mortlake Register only dates back to 1599, but St. Peter's, which is now incorporated with St. Mathew's, Friday Street, dates back to 1538, the year Cromwell, Earl of Essex, had the law passed bringing the register system into being. Here is a tough nut for us genealogists to crack.

Street Car Tickets.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial of Aug. 27 concerning "Pay-as-you-enter" cars has attracted considerable attention.

Why should the car companies go to the trouble and expense of furnishing tickets? And what is the difference whether I wait in line at a ticket window, or at a car platform?

All that is required of the public is to have a nickel ready. These are everywhere. Why not have one with you?

If the company is to do anything at all it could best establish one or two change-making booths for the convenience of patrons. This would only mean that it would sell nickels instead of tickets. Why not?

The whole ticket system is becoming archaic. The expense involved is totally unnecessary for either Subway, elevated, or surface. Machines suitable for receiving nickels are vastly better than those now made to receive tickets, and are absolutely accurate. Put them in use and save us all the necessity of carrying the pasteboards. Any other method is absurdly uneconomic. It would be as easy to furnish us with nickels as it is to sell us tickets.

Animals in Captivity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why is it that with so much being done for the prevention of cruelty to domestic animals we never hear the slightest protest raised against the appalling cruelty perpetrated on the unfortunate wild animals and birds that are exhibited in our zoological gardens and in animal and bird stores throughout the land? I refer particularly to the cooping up of these creatures in cages and boxes, in most cases much too small for even the stretching of limb or wing, and keeping them confined amidst stuffy surroundings when they, above all created things, require freedom, absolute freedom.

What good does it do to the human race? Educational, you will say. Well, will you or my children become more educated, more compassionate, more civilized by looking at lions, tigers, wolves, monkeys, birds, and reptiles existing under conditions that they were never intended for? If the young people must have an object lesson would not a stuffed specimen of the fauna of this and other countries answer the purpose just as well?

OUR STOCKS SOUGHT BY EUROPE, GARY SAYS

MUCH IDLE CASH ABROAD

It Is Being Gradually Invested Here—Foreign Steelmakers Very Friendly Toward Us, He Says.

Judge Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, returned yesterday from Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. with optimistic views concerning the industrial outlook for this country in the near future. He said there had been considerable improvement in business conditions in Europe this Summer, more especially in France and England. Money was plentiful in France, he said.

"Foreign investors are showing increased interest in and desire to invest in American securities and thus escape taxation," said Judge Gary. "The English think their welfare depends on the conditions in America, and therefore they are glad to see our business improving. This dependency on the United States has been readily growing, and their commercial relations with us are now much closer than ever before."

During his sojourn in England Judge Gary was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the Sheffield Chamber of Commerce at which the most prominent steel masters of Europe were present. He said that the steel market in England was quite dull, but there was a slight improvement in Germany.

The feeling both in England and Germany toward our steel manufactures is very friendly, he said, and there was a desire in Germany to keep in close touch with us, which was one of the good signs of the times.

Judge Gary declined to speak of the possibility of an eventual listing of the Steel Corporation shares on the Paris Bourse. The banks in England and France were filled with money, he said, and that was being gradually withdrawn to invest in our securities. During his motoring trip through Europe Judge Gary went into Spain for the first time, and said that he found that country 100 years behind the times. He only saw one thrashing machine at work in the entire country. All the harvesting work appeared to be done by hand as it was a century ago.

As to the steel trade in this country Judge Gary declined to commit himself until he had been back a few days, and got in close touch with affairs. He did not believe that the dinner which is to be tendered to him by steel men has any specific object in view.

MORE TALESMEN DISCHARGED.

Chicago Panel of Fifty Men Dismissed by Judge—Grand Juries Related.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—State Attorney Wayman's charges of jury tampering resulted to-day in the discharge of another venire of fifty men. This action was taken by Judge McEwen at the instance of counsel for the defense in the case of Gustave Myers, charged with perjury.

Mr. Wayman learned to-day that certain members drawn for the October Grand Jury were close friends of certain others who were members of the September Grand Jury. In fact, it is declared, successive Grand Juries were bound each to each by a clique some member or members of which were always to be found in the Grand Jury room. The existence of this system, the State Attorney says, accounts for the leakage of Grand Jury secrets to quarters where advance news was of vital importance.

It was reported to-day that representatives of interests believed to have been at the bottom of the alleged manipulation of the venire drawing machinery have disappeared. Some of them, it is said, have not been seen since bench warrants were issued for the arrest of Holland, Rayburn, and Martin.

Mr. Wayman is known to have obtained at least one confession concerning the scandal, and is believed to have obtained one or two in addition to-day. A report that one of the men arrested had turned State's evidence was neither confirmed nor denied to-day.

THE UBIQUITOUS GUEST.

I am the same Consumer who was with you all last year, whose woes were told in public prints and scattered far and near; I am the same downtrodden soul you knew the year before, and bruised and battered though I am, you see me here once more; perhaps your tears were shed for me in times of my distress, and your heart may have bled for me a gallon more or less; perhaps you may have prayed for me to make my burdens light when all the world was laid for me with pitfalls day and night; the world has no regard for me, the country does me wrong, but though my life is hard, you see someway I get along, and while injustice visits me and all my ways are rough, I'm still alive, which proves, you see, that I am pretty tough; for years may come and years may die and seasons ebb and flow, but every season here am I, with my same tale of woe.

The tongues of great men speak for me in clarion tones and clear; I guess I get more sympathy than anybody here. The statesman peels his coat for me, and with his flashing eye, he promises to vote for me and bids my hopes keep high; the press is solid on my side, the pulpit lends its hand; from public platforms far and wide men cheer me through the land; the speeches that are made for me would reach the world about, and selfish Greed is flayed for me with rounded words and stout; the guns of honeyed flattery bombard me all at once; abstractly I'm a hero, but concretely I'm a dunce; and while the world is fuming o'er the troubles that are mine I just go on consuming and consuming, rain or shine, and sympathy may clog the pen and speeches ebb and flow, but every year I'm back again, with my same tale of woe.

You'd think, with all the sympathy and good advice I get, that trouble soon would end for me, but I have troubles yet. I've got 'em hemstitched, got 'em plain, embroidered and with frills, and thus you see me back again, with all the same old ills; no sooner do they get me out of trouble and distress than I turn straightway right about into another mess. Oppression's foot is on my neck until I come to feel, from pressing down on me so hard, a blister on its heel. The world unites to speak my praise, in country or in town; it flatters me before my face and hits me when I'm down; so lend no concrete aid to me, though I be thin and gaunt, but grudge me not your sympathy, for that is all I want. 'Twas Adam first who set my pace, nor will my plaint be dumb till I have reached that fabled place of the Millennium, and even then I have no doubt, as eons ebb and flow, there will be some of me about with my same tale of woe.

NEW THEATRE SOON IN TIMES SQUARE

Playhouse to be Part of 12-Story Office Building at Broadway and 43d Street.

F. R. TATE, THEATRE LESSEE

Syndicate to Begin Work on $1,050,000 Structure in 60 Days—Big Increase in Times Square Values.

Following closely the tearing down of the old Hotel Metropole and the announcement that a new building is to be erected on the Astor property at the northeast corner of Broadway and Forty-second Street, there was closed yesterday a deal which will result in the improvement of another of the few remaining large parcels fronting on Times Square—the Fitzgerald property at the southeast corner of Broadway and Forty-third Street.

This property has been leased by Mrs. Mary A. Fitzgerald for twenty-one years at a net annual rental of $100,000, and for a second period of twenty-one years at $115,000 per annum, with a privilege of four renewal terms of equal length at a rental equal to 4 per cent. of the then appraised valuation of the ground, the lease requiring the construction of a twelve-story office building on the corner and a theatre building on the east end of the plot, fronting on Forty-third Street. The lease is to be taken by a syndicate organized by M. Greenwood, Jr., of Greenwood & Co. of 42 Broadway. Mrs. Fitzgerald was represented in the transaction by her attorney, Winthrop E. Dwight, and by the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company.

The syndicate consists of Frank R. Tate, the theatrical manager of St. Louis, Mo., associated with clients of Herbert T. Jennings of 204 Broadway, who is preparing the incorporation of the Forty-third Street Building Company. This company will be organized at once under the laws of this State with a capital of $1,200,000, and will build the theatre and office building, as provided in the terms of the lease. Possession of the site will be given within the next sixty days, and work will be begun immediately. Architect George Keister has completed the plans for the office building and theatre. Mr. Tate has taken a ten years' lease of the theatre from the date of its completion. He is well known in the theatrical world, and besides being interested in several of the most successful theatres in Chicago, is a large owner and manager of the Columbia, Grand, American, Imperial, and Havlin Theatres in St. Louis.

The design for the exterior of the new building will be classic Renaissance. The business and office structure on Broadway will have three stories of white granite and limestone, and above that it will be of semi-glazed, tool-faced white terra cotta. The theatre front on Forty-third Street is to be of the same materials as the Broadway front, with a similar facade, crowned with a classic cornice and balustrade. The main entrance to both theatre and office building will be at the southerly end of the premises on Broadway, with a spacious entrance vestibule to both, and a separate lobby for each.

The leessees, in addition to executing the lease to Mr. Tate, have let the contract for the construction of the theatre and office building, at an aggregate cost of $1,050,000, to the C. L. Gray Construction Company, which is also putting up the thirty-two-story Liberty Building, at Liberty and Nassau Streets, and the Heidelberg Electric Tower Building, at Broadway and Forty-second Street, on the old Metropole site.

Increase in Times Square Values.

Although the square-foot value represented by the lease for this Broadway and Forty-third Street corner has been surpassed in the deals for the Metropole property, the Astor property, at Broadway and Forty-second Street and the southeast corner of Forty-fourth Street, the transaction again directs attention to the remarkable increase in Times Square values. The rental for the first twenty-one-year term, $100,000, if capitalized on a 5 per cent. basis, indicates a valuation of $2,000,000, or about $110 a square foot.

On the same basis of calculation the lease of the Broadway and Forty-second Street corner, the United Cigar Stores Company, shows a square foot value of $165. For the Metropole site the owners, the Coe estate, will receive $50,000, representing a ground value of $1,000,000, or about $218 a square foot. Charles E. Rector's lease of the southeast corner of Broadway and Forty-fourth Street, 26.2 by 70, reveals almost exactly the same square foot value, since Mr. Rector will pay for this little plot $20,000 per annum, representing a value of $400,000.

Some idea of the increase which has taken place in the value of the Forty-third Street corner may be gathered from the fact that Mrs. Fitzgerald will now receive in rental within three or four years as much as the entire property would have sold for not many years ago—and to show this, it is not necessary to hark back forty or fifty years or to the days of the old Bloomingdale Road.

Exact figures concerning the Fitzgerald plot itself are not available in this connection, but for the site his Olympia, now the New York and Criterion Theatres, only a block further north, Oscar Hammerstein paid only about $500,000 less than fifteen years ago. In fact, when the mortgage on this enterprise was foreclosed, about 1899, the property virtually went begging in the real estate auction room, and the New York Life Insurance Company, which had loaned Mr. Hammerstein the money, had to buy it in for a little more than $900,000—that is, ground, buildings, and all, practically in their present condition. If this site could be delivered to-morrow as a vacant plot it would probably find a ready buyer at from $2,700,000 to $3,000,000.

Mrs. Fitzgerald has always declined all offers for the purchase of her plot, but brokers who have kept a close eye on the property will tell how, not over ten years ago, she was eager to lease it for $40,000 a year. Soon afterward came Times Square's awakening.

FOOD.

A Brain regularly nourished by proper food will have incentive and power for successful work.

Grape-Nuts is a true brain and nerve food. Made of whole wheat and barley, it contains the elements of vital energy—quickly absorbed by the system—which nourish and rebuild the gray matter of the brain and nerve centres.

"There's a Reason."

Read "The Road to Wellville" in pkgs.

Twenty-five years ago the site of Hammerstein's Victoria, 100 by 131, owned by the Gerrys, was leased to a Mr. Davidson for $5,000 a year, and, according to all report, was a pretty unprofitable bit of real estate for the lessee and his heirs for many years. It was occupied by a stable. Finally Mr. Hammerstein sublet it from the Davidsons. About four years ago the twenty-one year ground lease expired, and after a long squabble between rival appraisers and much litigation it was decided that Mr. Hammerstein should pay a ground rent of $32,500 under a new lease.

Transformation of Times Square.

With the work recently finished and that in sight for the immediate future the transformation of Times Square will soon be complete. Last year the Astors put up their new store and office structure on the west side of the Square, between Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets, and doubled the size of the Hotel Astor. Excavation is now in progress on the Metropole site, and it is now believed that the Cigar Stores Company will not defer operations at the northeast corner of Broadway and Forty-second Street for any great length of time. At Forty-fourth Street the delay in starting work on the new Rector hotel is said to be due only to a revision of the plans, looking to a larger and more elaborate structure.

At the northely end of the square, the greater part of the block bounded by Broadway and Seventh Avenue, Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth Streets, was taken over recently by Felix Isman, and at the northeast corner of Seventh Avenue and Forty-seventh Street, work is in progress on the new Columbia Theatre and office building. On the west side of Broadway, between Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh Streets will be the new Dillingham Theatre and the new $1,000,000 hotel and restaurant to be erected by the Shanleys. Further north at Forty-ninth Street, ex-Capt. James Churchill has just leased a large plot as the site for a new restaurant.

When the Times Building was planned, the Hotel Astor was the only modern structure facing Times Square. With the carrying out of projects already announced, another year will show few of its properties that have not undergone reimprovement, with the exception of the two blocks along its easterly side between Forty-fifth and Forty-seventh Streets.

Once upon a time there was a donkey who stood between a bucket of water and a bundle of fodder, unable to make up his mind whether to eat or to drink. And so, after a time the poor donkey died of starvation. That is one ending to the fable. Another ending has it that a little girl came along, took pity on the poor donkey, and led him home, where "they lived happily ever after." Which being decidedly the more pleasant ending of the two is the one which the Messrs. De Flers and de Caillavet have chosen for the farce acted under the title of "Inconstant George" at the Empire last night.

As it stands in the English version, made by Gladys Unger, the piece is undeniably amusing for a great part of the time, but, and this undeniably also, it has dull minutes, many of them. Pruning will do it good, and it sags dreadfully in the middle.

There is invariably a double handicap at the outset in these adapted plays. In the first place, for the perfect comfort of the perfectly proper Anglo-Saxon audience, it is absolutely essential that the translator must take a running jump over the thin ice instead of sliding on it in the way which makes it so delightful to the French, and in the second place the actors, whatever their attainments, are pretty certain to lack the lightness which would make it possible to do any sliding without falling through the ice.

As matters stand, however, Mr. Drew manages to do some fairly good skating, though it must be admitted that he labors hard to do it. Not in a long time has he been seen in a rôle in which he has been forced to such extremes to get his laughs, and though at times the lightness of his method is in evidence, it is apparently necessary for him to resort again and again to broader methods, the limit being reached when he appears wearing a low-comedy hat. For all that, however, he plays with an affectation of gayety, and, in the end, with a delicacy and sincerity that are most engaging.

"Inconstant George" appears to be largely built on the principle of the value of percussion and repercussion. Once a point is made the idea seems to be to go on repeating it over and over again until each person who can figure in the situation has been pressed into service. Thus, if George Bullin, who suffers from anaemia of the will, and who cannot make a choice of women any more than of cigarettes, tells one woman that he loves her, he must make exactly the same avowal in exactly the same words to all the others who happen around. If one comes to visit him by appointment, the second must appear to hear from him the same oaths of constancy couched in exactly the same words, and to charge him with duplicity precisely as the first woman has done only a few moments before. Then a third must enter, and the whole performance must be repeated. But though this may grow exceedingly tiresome in time, the authors have developed much of their theme along fresh and original lines, and there is so much brightness to the dialogue that, taken as a whole, the play provides a pleasing entertainment.

George, who is described as having six cravats to one idea, barely enough head to catch cold in, and belonging to a set which must form a syndicate of brains in order to get through the morning paper, is a good-natured duffer. It is possible that his willingness to make love to the cousin and wife of his best friend at one and the same time might not be regarded with particular favor outside of the peculiar French set which the authors introduce, but as the husband does not object, and in fact calls on George in the middle of the night, getting him out of bed to tell him so, and offering him his choice of either of the ladies, there is no occasion for others to be worried.

It is at this point that George, suddenly developing an intelligence almost human, wants to know whether the husband's suggestion is prompted by generosity or is merely a dirty trick. In effect this scene is a sort of interlude dividing the two halves of the main theme, which concerns itself with George's ultimate surrender to the ward of the man the affection of whose relatives he has tried to steal, and who has been confident all the time that such would be the ending of his friend's peccadillos. But to give the scene its full value, a much surer comedy touch, on the part of the actor playing the husband, is required than was in evidence last night. Incidentally it has been apparent always, whenever George says that he is through with all women, that a new one would arrive to make him break his word and start him out afresh in his attempt at conquest.

Ultimately Inconstant George, with no apparent indication of growing constancy, is the willing victim of little Micheline, his friend's ward, who has an April disposition, and who decides to marry him. This character, played in Paris by Marthe Régnier, is the most effective in the piece. Mary Boland is hardly an ideal selection for it either personally or temperamentally, and its subtleties escape her. But she undoubtedly won the approval of most of those present. In fact, she shared with Mr. Drew a large part of the applause.

Acting of more definite excellence was provided by Desmond Kelly, as a music-hall singer, approved by "Inconstant George," while the beautiful Jane Laurel and Adelaide Prince agreeably filled in the other affinities. Mr. Sabine was not entirely at ease in a rôle which calls for greater weight and years, and Mr. MacDougnal left something to be desired in an exceptionally rich servant bit.

Just why the name of Wilbur Wright should be drawn into this French play is not clearly apparent, unless, perhaps, like the "saloon" in "The Flag Lieutenant" it is intended to make everybody feel at home.

JAMES D. SMITH DEAD.

Ex-President of New York Stock Exchange and ex-Commodore of New York Yacht Club.

James D. Smith, head of the brokerage house of James D. Smith & Co., 71 Broadway, died yesterday afternoon at his home, Linden Lodge, Stamford, Conn., from a complication of diseases.

For years James D. Smith was one of the most prominent men in financial, society and yachting circles of this city. Not until the beginning of his fatal illness two weeks ago did he relinquish the control of his affairs in Wall Street.

Mr. Smith was born in Exeter, N. H., on Nov. 24, 1829. He came of old New England stock, and his father was a prominent clergyman. After receiving an academic education he moved to Ridgefield, where he became a clerk in a local bank. He soon afterward came to this city and was employed by the firm of Hoyt, Sprague & Co. as cashier and bookkeeper. After obtaining a good business knowledge here Mr. Smith went to Louisville, Ky., where he became a partner in the firm of James Low & Co.

It was while in Kentucky that Mr. Smith became interested in the stock market. He returned to this city and organized the firm of Jameson, Smith & Cutting. This firm afterward became known as the James D. Smith & Co. Mr. Smith became a member of the New York Stock Exchange in 1868. He was elected President of that body in 1885, serving in that capacity for one year. He visited Europe many times in the interests of his firm, and among the securities which he successfully placed abroad were the $2,000,000 of St. Louis City Park and sewerage bonds, $4,000,000 of Mississippi and Illinois River bonds, and $6,000,000 of North Carolina first mortgage bonds.

At different times during his life Mr. Smith was a Director in several of the largest corporations in the country, including the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Kansas Pacific Railroad Company, the Quicksilver Mining Company, the Panama Railroad Company, and the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Companies. He also was a member of the New York Produce Exchange and the Mining Exchange, and at one time was a Director of the New York Elevated Railroad Company.

While occupying so prominent a position in the financial world, Mr. Smith generously gave his time and ability to the citizens of the State in which he resided the greater part of his life. He was a member of the Connecticut General Assembly in 1881, and in the following year was made State Treasurer, in which capacity he served with notable success. During his term he refunded the State debt of $500,000. He was President of the Stamford City Council from 1894 to 1897.

Mr. Smith joined the New York Yacht Club in 1873, and was its Commodore in 1882. He was on the Regatta Committee in 1884, and for twelve years he was Chairman of the America's Cup Committee. He had been the owner of several well-known yachts, and at the time of his death owned the Viking, on which he took part in the last cruise of the New York Yacht Club. Among the other clubs to which Mr. Smith belonged were the Union League, The Players, New Haven Yacht, Stamford Yacht, and the Corinthian Yacht Clubs.

Gallery Notes.

The National Arts Club is contributing to the Hudson-Fulton Celebration an exhibition of prints illustrating the development of New York during three centuries. Among the collectors who have lent valuable and interesting examples of Americana are Mrs. Henry Harmon Neill, C. A. Munn, A. W. Drake, H. R. Drowne, R. P. Bolton, J. O. Wright, J. Clarence Davies, E. A. Cruikshank, and W. E. Gaillard. The exhibition is arranged chronologically, the earliest exhibit being a view of the Island of Manhattan, photographed from the original in the Lenox Library, of the date 1651.

One of the most important exhibits is a "Bridge's map" of New York, dated 1807, and showing Elgin Gardens, Bloomingdale Square, Hamilton Square, Manhattan Place and Observatory Place, and the city as surveyed and laid out officially as it is to-day above Houston Street. The map is lent by Mr. Crimmins and is the despair of collectors.

There is also the print representing Wall Street as it was in 1828 looking toward the second Trinity Church, which is lent by Mrs. Neill, and is one of two copies known. The same collector lends a print of the Franklin House, 197 Broadway, (the present Western Union site,) of which there is no other known copy, and a southwest view of the City of New York, (1768,) which is ill preserved but has taken on a tone that adds to its beauty. A southeast view, "Drawn on the Spot by Captain Thomas Howdell of the Royal Artillery," is lent by Mr. Crimmins, and the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, whose remarkable exhibition of rare old views of New York last Spring was a joy to the specialist, have lent the series of historical subjects made for their society.

H. Russell Drowne lends a fine series of historical portraits, among them the lively delineation of Paul Jones on board the Serapis, said to be engraved from a drawing from life, and Seymour Dunbar fills a special case with a very interesting set of prints showing the development of transportation from the days of double-decker stages and canal boats to the modern carriage. Among these is a view of the Westchester Young Ladies' Seminary with a railroad train in the foreground, which, as a specimen of J. Sartain's engraving, deserves the attention of the art critics.

Another exhibit that more particularly than others appeals to the aesthetic sense is the set of Darley's illustrations for "Sleepy Hollow." Seen in these appropriate surroundings, they appear at their best, and the full, flexible line, clean, open modeling and ingenious invention demand fresh praise.

The exhibition as a whole has naturally a historic and curiosity value rather than special artistic merit, and it contains much that will interest the visitor to New York during these commemorative days. It is open on week days from 10 in the morning until 6 in the afternoon.

Rice for Honeymoon Couple.

Rice, sprinkled over many of the passengers and scattered about the decks and companionways of the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse yesterday morning, marked the departure on their honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Voss, whose marriage took place a few afternoons ago at Sherry's. Mrs. Voss was Miss Vere Kupfer, the daughter of Mrs. Adelina B. Kupfer. Her grandfather, Samuel C. Boehm, died recently, and the marriage was witnessed only by a few relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Voss will make a long automobile tour.

¶ TO BE ACTUAL, in my arguments I begin with the smallest possible proposition in Real Estate investment.

¶ I am authorized to sell a number of two-family houses at an investment figure which makes them a prime obbject for investment.

¶ A small man investing the sum of 5 years' rent—$3,000—can buy a two-family house absolutely new and modern; he can occupy one-half of the house, and renting the other half receive enough revenue to pay all charges for maintaining of his property, so that his rental will stand him nothing except the interest on his investment, for which, however, his property will more than correspondingly increase in value over the price at which it was first bought.

¶ This is an actual proposition, and can be demonstrated.

W. K. VANDERBILT, JR., AND WIFE PARTED?

THEY HAVEN'T MET LATELY

Mrs. Vanderbilt Has Spent Much Time in Europe and Her Husband Has Lived at the Brook Club.

The fact that Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., has leased the Barney estate at Wheatly Hills, Westbury, L. I., was announced yesterday afternoon by S. Osgood Pell & Co., the real estate brokers in the transaction. The announcement was taken as lending color to a report, long current, that Mrs. Vanderbilt and her husband had agreed to live separately. The country home of W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., is at Great Neck, L. I., and is in his name. The town house formerly occupied by the couple is at 666 Fifth Avenue, but that is in Mrs. Vanderbilt's name. The leasing of the Wheatly Hills property therefore gives her both a city and town house of her own. Mr. Vanderbilt has been living at the Brook Club lately while in town.

It was said yesterday that a formal agreement of separation had actually been drawn up by the lawyers for the couple, containing provisions as to financial arrangements and the custody of the two children, Muriel and William K. Vanderbilt, 3d. For a year it has been persistently reported that Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mr. Vanderbilt's mother, and Mrs. Theresa Oelrichs, Mrs. Vanderbilt's sister, had been trying to effect a reconciliation.

Mrs. Belmont, at her office in the Woman's Suffrage Headquarters at 505 Fifth Avenue, refused to say anything about the current reports yesterday, either to affirm or deny them. Mrs. Oelrichs could not be seen. At Mr. Vanderbilt's office in the Grand Central Station Building it was said that he was not in town, and that no one knew where he could be found. Mrs. Vanderbilt herself, with her two children, is on the way home from Europe on the Lusitania.

Rumors that a coldness existed between Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt obtained wide currency last January. Mrs. Vanderbilt was then making her home for a part of the time with her sister, Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-seventh Street. Mr. Vanderbilt went on a yachting trip to the West Indies, but returned suddenly to New York, and went to live at the Brook Club. He then sailed for France, returning in June with Mrs. Belmont, who had arranged to occupy her house at Newport.

About that time Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Oelrichs were in Newport. On June 15 Mrs. Vanderbilt, with her two children, sailed for Europe. No meeting has taken place between husband and wife for almost a year, it is said.

William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., married in 1899 Miss Virginia Fair, who with a sister and brother inherited one of the largest fortunes accumulated in the West. At the time of their engagement it was pointed out that she was a Catholic, while he was an Episcopalian. It was feared for a time that this difference in faith might prevent the marriage.

Major Sewall S. Farwell.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Sept. 21.—Major Sewall S. Farwell, a civil war veteran and former member of Congress, died at his home in Montecello to-day. Major Farwell was born near Kean, Coshocton County, Ohio, on April 26, 1834. He received an academic education and moved to Iowa in 1852. At the outbreak of the civil war he enlisted as Captain of the Thirty-first Iowa Infantry Regiment, and served with that body until the close of the war. He returned to Iowa and was elected to the State Senate, where he served for four years. He was appointed Collector of Internal Revenue in 1875, serving for six years. He resigned that position in 1881 to enter Congress. After leaving the Forty-seventh Congress he was elected President of the Montecello State Bank.

Bishop McCloskey's Funeral.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 21.—Funeral services for the late William George McCloskey, Catholic Bishop of Louisville, the oldest prelate in the United States, who died Friday last, were held to-day at the Cathedral of the Assumption, the scene for so many years of his active duties as a churchman. Solemn pontifical mass was celebrated by the Most Rev. Henry Moeller, Archbishop of Cincinnati. The Right Rev. Denis O'Donoghue, Auxiliary Bishop of Indianapolis, delivered the funeral sermon. His body was taken by special train to Nazareth, Ky., and buried beside that of a brother.

MAXINE ELLIOTT RETURNS.

Has a Session with Customs Men Over Her English Table Linen.

Maxine Elliott arrived from Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. yesterday morning. She will open her season in "The Chaperon," her play of last season, at Kansas City, on Oct. 11. As an added attraction she will present a one-act Japanese play called "Sayonara," by Elizabeth Goodnow. About the first of the year she will return to New York, to appear at her own theatre in a new play called "Deborah of Tod's," by Mrs. Henry De La Pasture.

Miss Elliott met the customs officers when the steamer docked yesterday morning. She had decided not to declare anything, for she could not decide whether the table linen brought from her London house to be used in her New York home, was dutiable. The Inspector who discovered the first napkin in her trunk called for assistance. After a Deputy Surveyor and an Appraiser had examined the questioned articles, Miss Elliott was allowed to enter them. She spent more than two hours on the dock before matters were arranged.

She expressed her grief at the death of Clyde Fitch, author of one of her plays. Her sister, Gertrude, will not accompany her husband, Forbes-Robertson, to America. She has a month-old girl, named Chloe.

Obituary Notes.

JAMES H. STEVENSON, formerly of Iowa, where he was engaged in journalism, died on Monday in Washington as the result of a street car accident. He served as a Second Lieutenant in the Union Army in the civil war, and left a widow and five children.

WILL TRY TO ENJOIN ZEROLA.

Italian Company Holds Tenor to Contract—Released, Says Hammerstein.

In reply to the statement made yesterday by the managers of the Italian Grand Opera Company that they would at once institute proceedings to get an injunction against Signor Zerola's singing at the Manhattan Opera House to-morrow evening, Mr. Hammerstein said last night:

"In reference to the statements made by those in charge of an Italian opera company in this city in the case of the tenor Nicola Zerola, I say that Zerola was under contract with me to appear in the regular season of the Manhattan Opera House. When I found him advertised to appear with another company in this city, I promptly protested, and instructed my attorneys to begin legal proceedings. Signor Zerola then informed me that unless his present employers could furnish full security for the salary they agreed to pay him for eight months, he would agree to keep his old contract with me.

"As such salary guarantee was not forthcoming, he asked to be released by them at once. Mr. Ferrara, the then Director of the company, recognizing the justice of my claim, released Signor Zerola from his obligations and his contract with his (Ferrara's) company. I have the release signed by him."

At the Academy of Music a copy of the alleged contract with Zerola, in English, was on exhibition. Mr. Pinsuti, the artistic director of the company, said that the Italian Grand Opera Company would certainly attempt to get an injunction to prevent the tenor appearing at the Manhattan. All the preliminary steps have been taken to this effect, it is said, and the matter may be brought up in court to-day.

Mr. Pinsuti said: "Zerola was hired to appear four times weekly in my company. The company lived up to its agreement in every way. We advanced his steamship passage to America and return with a liberal advancement of salary to cover all reasonable risks.

"Despite these measures Zerola saw fit to go to Mr. Hammerstein. He failed to see that we might take advantage of the law. If the law cannot aid us now, of what use is a contract?

"I am wholly responsible for Zerola's appearance in America, and yet he has sung but twice with this company."

Mrs. A. Stewart Appleton, the general manager of the Italian company, was up early yesterday to see her lawyers about the matter. In the Subway she caught her foot in a closing Subway car gate and injured it slightly. The Zerola matter is in charge of her attorneys, Palmiere & Wechsler.

CHICAGO WHITE SOX SHUT OUT BY YANKS

WARHOP YIELDS FEW HITS

Browns Give Athletics a Setback and Washington Divides Double-header with the Detroit Team.

Ghosts of the Hitless Wonders they once were, the Chicago Americans appeared on the Hilltop yesterday for their last series of the season. Hitless they still may be called—they made only six safeties in nine innings—but there's little wonderful about them. Messenger made a brace of marvelous catches, but with those all the wonder ceased. Stallings's men defeated the White Sox by a score of 5 to 0, and did it with ease that took all the spirit out of the contest early in the game. It was not exactly slaughter. The Yankees themselves achieved only seven hits to get their five tallies. But it looked a good deal like cruelty to minors.

Scott worked through the game for Chicago, although Manager Sullivan had White and Walsh warming up from the second inning on. Only two of New York's runs were earned. Errors accounted for the first, second, and fifth. The Sox played loosely even when they were not committing actual errors. Their throws were ragged and most of their catches were none too sure. Much snappier work was done by the Hilltoppers, and their heady batting enabled them to make the most of every advantage the visitors gave them. The excellence of their sacrificial tapping was particularly noticeable. Instead of making attempts to drive the ball out all the time, they laid it down when the situation called for such play. And most of the time they were right up on their toes for base running.

Brockett was retired from the game in the second inning by an accident. He knocked down a stiff drive from Purtell, the batter being thrown out by Gardner. The King's hand was hurt severely and Warhop took his place in the box. It was hard luck, for Brockett was twirling in style that seemed to spell victory. The spectators were delighted by the fact that his withdrawal made no difference in the outcome. Warhop worked as well as anybody could ask, and his pitching was especially effective in crises.

The scoring was begun in the second chapter. Knight and Austin went to first on balls and Sweeney sacrificed. Warhop struck out, but Hemphill was safe because Purtell let his grounder get by, Jack and Jimmy recording on the error. In the fourth it looked as if Chicago might cut down the lead. A pitched ball hit Altizer's kneecap, and Umpire Connolly consoled him with the gift of a base. Cole sacrificed, Altizer speeding to second in a way that showed his injury was not permanent. But the runner was incautious and was caught off by Warhop's swift hurl to Knight. Barrows got an infield tap, but Purtell died at first.

New York looked dangerous in the same round. Knight cracked out a single, for which Parent made a good try. Austin sacrificed. Bad coaching by Demmitt led Knight to try for home on Sweeney's single to left, with the consequence that Jack was thrown out to Owens by Barrows. The scoring was resumed in the fifth. Hemphill walked and Keeler sacrificed. Tannehill took Chase's grounder and Hemphill was run down between second and third, Hal going to second on the choice. Chase came in on Engle's hot single to left. In the next inning New York got a fourth count on Knight's beautiful bunt that plunged Scott into a whirl of perplexity. Austin's second fine sacrifice, Sweeney's out at first, and Warhop's single to right, the batter being caught stretching.

Just before that Altizer was hit with a pitched ball for the second time, his elbow being the point of impact. One man was down when that happened. Altizer had more hard luck at second, for he was caught trying to steal that base. Cole got a base on balls and Barrows singled him to third, but Purtell flied to Hemphill.

The game's last run was gained in the eighth on Gardner's double with one gone, Knight's out at first, and Owens's muff of Tannehill's throw on Austin's grounder that let the forward runner cross the line. Jimmy made first on the choice and stole second. Sweeney strolled, but he was forced by Warhop.

Chicago filled the bases in the ninth on a hit, an error, and a walk, but with two out Messenger grounded to Warhop and died at first. The score:

Weak Team Beats Athletics.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.—St. Louis to-day defeated Philadelphia by 2 to 1. St. Louis was made up of three young outfielders, with two of its regular outfielders in infield positions, but put up a splendid game. Bailey held Philadelphia down to three hits, one of which was a scratch home run by Oldring in the fourth inning, when Crompton fell trying to stop a long drive. St. Louis tied the score in the seventh inning, on an error by Collins, a wild pitch by Morgan, and Wallace's single. In the eighth inning, Philadelphia had the bases filled, with one out, but Morgan was caught trying to score on an attempted squeeze play, Collins, the batsman, missing the ball. Hartzell scored the winning run in the ninth inning on his single, Griggs's sacrifice, Devoy's out, and Wallace's single. Baker doubled in Philadelphia's final turn at bat, and took third on Davis's out, but the former was doubled up at the plate when Murphy sent a fly to Crompton. Score:

Senators and Tigers Split Even.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Before the largest crowd of the season Washington and Detroit split even in to-day's double header, the first going to the visitors by the score of 3 to 1, while the locals scored a shutout in the second, 2 to 0. Willetts and Gray fought it out in the first round and the former was much the better, as he allowed but two hits, a bunt by Milan and a clean drive by Street. Gray was hit safely six times, one of the hits being a beautiful drive for three bases to the clubhouse by Bush.

A phenomenal catch by Cobb in the sixth inning probably saved the game. With two on bases and two out, Lelivelt hit into short right. It appeared as though the ball would surely fall safe, but Cobb came in on a run, dived for the ball, and although he slid along on one side of his body he came up with the ball.

Washington's only run developed in the first inning from a base on balls, Bush's muff of O'Leary's assist, and a wild throw by O'Leary. Detroit's first run was scored in the sixth. Bush tripled, and after Cobb had fanned, Crawford singled to left and Bush scored.

In the ninth a single by D. Jones, a base on balls to Bush, a force-out by Cobb, a pass to Crawford, and Moriarty's single to right sent D. Jones and Cobb over the rubber.

In the second game the champions found Walter Johnson a great puzzle, especially when a hit would have scored runs. Killian allowed three hits to be bunched in one inning.

"Cy" Young Beaten by Boston.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—"Cy" Young was beaten to-day on the local grounds for the first time since he left the Boston Club last year, the home team winning, 7 to 3, in an uninteresting game. The veteran pitcher was hit hard, while Smith was generally effective. Manager McGuire was presented with a large floral piece before the game. The score:

Pirates Score Double Shutout.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Sept. 21.—Pittsburg won both games of a double header with Boston here to-day, shutting out the visitors both times, the first score being 2 to 0 and the second 5 to 0. The feature of the games was the batting of Wilson, who made a hit every time he was legally at bat. Both games were interesting, brilliant plays being made on both sides. Seven double plays were made in the two games. The scores:

Short Stop Barry on Crutches.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.—John Barry, short stop of the Philadelphia American League Baseball Club, who was spiked by "Ty" Cobb in yesterday's Detroit game, is on crutches to-day. "Connie" Mack, manager of the local team, said to-day that Barry's wound is one of the worst ever received by a professional ball player from another's spikes. Because of the extent of the wound it is not certain whether Barry will again be able to play this season. No blame is attached to Cobb for the accident.

NINE CARS TO START IN 24-HOUR RACE

TRACK IMPROVED AND SAFE

Crews Will Set Up Camps on Course To-day and Drive Contesting Cars in Trial Spins.

Nine of the fastest and most powerful automobiles constructed in this country and Europe will compete for the international twenty-four-hour championship on the Brighton Beach Motordrome on Friday and Saturday of this week. Though entries were to have closed yesterday a request was made by two prospective entrants that the list be not finally concluded until the opening of the first mail this morning. Still another car was provisionally nominated with the condition that it would be a starter if it can be got ready in time for the race.

One of the surprises yesterday was the nomination of a second Rainier car, Jack A. Rainier being the entrant. It will be a duplicate of the car nominated by his father, John T. Rainier, and of 45-50 horse power. The drivers of the second Rainier will be "Wally" Owen and C. Bowen.

The Rainier entries were unexpected in view of the statement made at the close of the last race that no more cars of that make would be put into track competition, because of the dangers attendant thereupon. Both the Mr. Rainiers, however, assured themselves that every possible precaution had been taken by the Motor Racing Association to prevent disaster of any kind in this week's contest and that the remodeling of the track had rendered it faster and safer than any similar course they had ever seen. Having finished in second place in both of the preceding twenty-four-hour races, the Rainiers are now determined to snatch the final and deciding contest of the series for the Sewall & Alden Trophy, the record prizes, and other cash emoluments.

Another entry yesterday was that of a 50 horse power American roadster, with Kilpatrick, Downey, and Tollman as alternate drivers. This car has been quietly put through its paces on road courses, and the entrant believes it is fast enough to show the way to the old timers.

The Fiat, Lozier, Buick, and Palmer & Singer cars all did fast work in practice on the Motordrome yesterday, and without exception every driver predicted record work for the race on Friday night and Saturday.

The entries, with horse power and drivers named, are as follows:

Fiat, 45 horse power, Fiat Auto Company, Ralph De Palma, E. H. Parker, and E. Hawley, drivers.

Lozier, 50 horse power, Lozier Motor Company; H. Cobe and J. Seymour, drivers.

Lozier, 50 horse power, Lozier Motor Company; Ralph Mulford and Cyrus Patschke, drivers.

Buick, 30 horse power, A. G. Southworth; Louis Chevrolet and G. De Witt, drivers.

Palmer & Singer, 60 horse power, Palmer & Singer Company; Ray Howard and Frank Lescault, drivers.

Rainier, 45-50 horse power, John T. Rainier; Louis Disbrow and H. Lund drivers.

Rainier, 45-50 horse power, Jack A. Rainier; Wally Owens and C. Bowen, drivers.

American Roadster, 50 horse power, American Automobile Company; J. Kilpatrick, J. Downey, and G. Tollman, drivers.

The Lozier, Buick, and Rainier crews will take up their camps at the track to-day, and probably all of the nine cars named will be at practice on the mile speedway.

Patrons of the race are promised that it will be finished promptly at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon in order to give ample time for the return to the city before the start of the illuminated water parade on the Hudson.

Dr. Frank A. King was yesterday added to the medical and surgical staff that will make their headquarters at the hospital tent in the "White City" in front of the grand stand.

Phillies Lose Loose Game.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Sept. 21.—Philadelphia was defeated in a loosely played game here this afternoon, the winning run being scored on a pass to Bescher, a stolen base, and Jacklitsch's wild throw to centre field. Errors were responsible for all the runs scored by the visitors. Dooin was spiked in the fourth inning and was forced to retire. Score:

President Brush was not benefited very much by the trip and looked feeble as he was assisted down the gangplank. He entered his automobile and was driven home.

FIGHT FOR INDOOR HONORS.

New York A.C. Expects to Turn Tables on Irish-Americans in Championships.

The New York Athletic Club is feeling somewhat sore over the result of the games on Saturday, when the Irish-American Athletic Club won easily, and the athletes are all training hard for the indoor championships on Oct. 4 and 5 at Madison Square Garden, when they expect to turn the tables on the Winged Fist contingent, as conditions will be different. Lawson Robertson, the trainer of the Irish-Americans, however, looks for a repetition of Saturday's results.

The feature of these championships will be the 600 and 1,000 yard races. Sheppard, Lunghi, Kiviat, Hillman, and Gissing will start in these events, and it is a toss up as to who will win. The burst of speed with which Sheppard finished the half mile on Saturday at the senior championships shows that he is returning to his old-time form. Gissing is a dangerous man at any time, and the New York Athletic Club followers are depending on him to win the 1,000-yard event. Lunghi is a marvel at any distance, from 600 to 1,000 yards, and many claim he can smash all the records between these two distances. Hillman, when trained for a 600-yard race, has never yet met his equal. Kiviat is a wonder for his age. Although only a schoolboy, he has already traveled close to record time on several occasions. He is a most consistent performer, and a good race is always assured when he starts. These five men are undoubtedly the fastest in the world to-day in their class, and it will be many a day before such a select field faces the start.

In the two-mile race, George Bonhag, the record holder, will toe the mark with Wilson, the English champion; Sullivan, Daly, Collins, Bellars, Bailey, and other well-known distance men. Bonhag has been resting up all Summer, but is in training for these games, and if he reaches the form he was in last Winter he will surely be the champion.

MINEOLA FAIR OPENS.

Howard Gould's Chicken Wins—Straight Heats in Trotting Races.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Sept. 21.—The attendance of the opening day of the fair of the Agricultural Society of Queens-Nassau County to-day, was somewhat of a disappointment. The usual cattle, poultry, and educational exhibits were up to the standard, and the country folk had little time for the light-harness events on the track surrounding the horse show ring.

Howard Gould was a prominent exhibitor in the poultry exhibit. He made a good display of white Wyandottes and captured two firsts, three seconds, and three thirds with his exhibit. Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay donated the usual prizes for the educational classes, which were on exhibition in the main hall. Mrs. Mackay motored over from Roslyn and spent considerable time in the building.

Three events were down for decision in the light-harness class, each of which was decided in straight heats.

LIVONIA RAN OFF WITH FILLY STAKE

Fast Two-Year-Old, with Top Weight, Easily Captured the Willow Handicap.

THE SQUIRE WON FAST RACE

King's Commoner, Just from Canada, Landed the Longest Odds of the Day, 30 to 1, at Gravesend.

Of the several twists that public form received in the results at the Gravesend race course yesterday the most severe was in the result of the feature event, the Willow Handicap, for fillies two years old, for which the fast filly Livonia ran away from her field, in complete contradiction of her wretched showing only two days before. Livonia, winner of the Great Eastern Handicap at Sheepshead Bay and victor over some of the smartest of the season's two-year-olds, was smothered in the field that ran behind Mexoana Friday, after she raced part of the way with Mexoana, and, while there was some doubt about the truth of the performance of Livonia in that race, horsemen regarded her doubtfully when she went out as top weight in a small field of fast horses for the Willow, five and a half furlongs.

With Dugan substituted for Scoville, who rode her in her losing race, Livonia still had the confidence of her stable and started as a strong favorite over Louise S., which, as the race was run, offered the only contention, and that of a mild character. Louise S. was first away, but Livonia ran past her at once, and, after taking the lead, settled down there in a smooth big gallop, and, without appearing to be extended at any stage of the contest, ran away from her opponents, and won about as she pleased, pulling back to Louise S., which finished a length and a half away and clear of Starport, third, in 1:07 3-5.

In the selling mile and a quarter the Western horse The Peer shook up form again. The Peer, which made his first appearance in the East at Saratoga, has been chasing moderate selling class fields vainly until yesterday, when in a field just a little better than he has been meeting, he took the new part of being pursued. Superstition, the post favorite, was dying away after leading to the head of the stretch, where The Peer, galloping second to that point, went on. The distance seemed to suit The Peer, for from the moment that he made his move he held his field safe, and won easily by two lengths, Superstition barely lasting long enough to save second place by a head from Belleview.

The mile and a furlong handicap furnished the most spectacular race of the day, when Tony Bonero, with a featherweight in the saddle, went on in the lead with The Squire after him. In the run to the stand they strung out the field in a long procession, and entering the back stretch Tony Bonero and The Squire were so far in front of the others that two races seemed to be in competition. Tony Bonero came back to The Squire gradually, and under his effort after Tony Bonero The Square was going back to the others at the end, when, ridden out, he finished first, a length in front of Woodcraft, which came from far back in the crowd.

In the first race King's Commoner, just from Canada, with nothing in his latest form there to indicate that he might be winner of any kind of race, took place with the array of sensational long-chance winners at Gravesend in the first event. The field that ran was large and commonplace, and Royal Captive looked the best so plainly that she started as a warm favorite. Then King's Commoner, breaking quickest, went straight along in front, and, never being headed in the six-furlong run, won easily at odds of 30 to 1, untaken, so far as the report went, while Enfield, another newcomer, at 12 to 1, finished second, Royal Captive stopping at the end and not being placed.

The summaries:

Sacrifice of Income

In cases where the security value is relatively equal, bonds having a reasonably broad market usually yield a much higher rate of income than bonds of active market. Investors frequently sacrifice considerable income by investing in bonds of active market, when, as a matter of fact, bonds having a reasonably broad market would meet their requirements fully.

Our Circular No. 113 describes several issues of sound investment bonds combining safety of principal, liberal income yield and a reasonably broad market.

STEEL SHARES LEAD RALLY

Market's Reactionary Course Arrested by Rise in Steel and Pennsylvania—Reading and Lehigh Weak.

The main movement of prices in yesterday's stock market was reactionary. A sharp break in Reading shares here and an even more abrupt fall in Lehigh Valley on the Philadelphia market, the loss in the stock running to above 12 points at one time, were the forerunners of a general decline which ran from midday until well on toward the close of business. A very large speculative interest had been built up in Reading on the assumption that the Directors of the Jersey Central at their meeting during the course of the day would increase the dividend on that road's shares, a great majority of which are owned by the Reading. From the increased income thus expected to come into the Reading's treasury a larger distribution upon Reading shares was anticipated. The Jersey Central Directors met according to schedule, but declared only the usual dividend. This became the signal for urgent selling of Reading here, and apparently of Lehigh Valley in Philadelphia, although the connection between the stock of the last-named road and the fortunes of Jersey Central is not too clear. It became apparent at once that the market as a whole was ripe for a reaction, and that Reading's break was simply the signal for it. Before the movement had run its course losses of 3 points or more had been sustained by a number of the more active stocks, and it was not until vigorous buying of Steel shares set in that the decline was stayed. Steel itself rose on such purchases, which were continued until the end of the session, to 85, a new high record for the stock, and its strength, together with the corresponding rise and accumulation of Pennsylvania, steadied the rest of the market, but left a majority of stocks at the close under the quotations of the previous night. The facts underlying the market strength of the shares of steel and iron producing companies have been too often set forth here to require repetition, while as for Pennsylvania the belief inspired by the rise in the stock of that road yesterday was that the Directors of the company at their meeting to-day will arrange new financing to carry valuable rights. Further comment was general on President Taft's Des Moines proposals regarding railroad legislation, but the consensus of opinion is that their sole effect will be to hasten the completion of a number of important plans now under consideration in railroad circles. On the Cotton Exchange a sharp upturn in prices followed the receipt of disquieting news regarding the damage inflicted upon growing cotton by a violent storm moving along the Mississippi Valley.

Money market conditions remain unchanged. The banks on routine transactions with the Sub-Treasury reported a loss of $611,000, but this is less than one-fifth that suffered by them at this time last week. New York exchange in Chicago moved in such fashion as to suggest somewhat heavier shipments to the interior than the unexpectedly light ones a week ago.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Reacts from New High Records—Closes 2 to 6 Points Net Higher.

Cotton made new high records again yesterday on active general buying on the Gulf storm news. Prices eased off as the demand from outside sources was appeased and the close was barely steady at a net gain of only 2@6 points. Telegraphic communication with points in the direct path of the storm has been impossible and at no time during the day was the Exchange in communication with New Orleans, so little is known regarding the actual damage.

The market opened firm at an advance of 7@11 points, reacted and then firmed. Contract prices follow:

Trading in Reduced Volume, with Price Changes Inconsiderable on the Curb.

NIPISSING'S HIGH RECORD

Reaches 13¼, High Price for Year, on Large Transactions, but Closes Even with Opening—Coppers Irregular.

Curb trading was in reduced volume yesterday and irregular. The strength in Nipissing was one of the features of the mining list, and the stock made a new high record for the year at 13¼. The close, after transactions of 11,500 shares, was at 12¾, even with the opening price. La Rose and Kerr Lake both closed fractionally below the opening levels. Among the coppers trading was comparatively slack and price changes inconsiderable. One of the features of the industrial list was the activity in International Nickel preferred, which reported transactions of 500 shares at 88¼.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—One of the earliest and most important bull considerations yesterday was the advance of 1d. to 1⅛d. at Liverpool. Once started, the advance progressed rapidly. After some hesitation and a little setback around midday, the upturn was resumed near the close. While only 2 or 3 loads were actually reported for export, part of the late buying was on rumors that Winnipeg had done some business and that cash wheat was in good demand at various markets, with Southwest mills buying in Minneapolis. Winter wheat arrivals were light. Receipts at all primary points were 2,075,000 bushels, contrasted with 1,875,000 bushels last week and 2,467,000 bushels a year ago. Cash wheat in New York remained nominal, closing: No. 2 red, $1.10⅝ elevator, and $1.08½, free on board afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.09⅝ and No. 2 hard Winter, $1.12⅞, free on board afloat.

CORN.—New crop positions were strong yesterday until the last half hour, when they eased off a little, but September was relatively weak. Receipts at Chicago exceeded the estimates by nearly 100 cars and 354 cars were expected on Wednesday, while reports said that the contract grade was being rapidly increased. Cables were ¼d. lower and interior receipts practically the same as last year. Cash corn was quite nominal, closing 78c. for No. 2 in elevator, 79c. delivered, and 66⅝c. for new, free on board, afloat, Winter shipment.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Traders Followed Pennsylvania.

Traders who participated in the movement in Pennsylvania, the rise in which helped pull the market out of a rather serious decline, wondered whether their luck with that stock would be any better than it had been with St. Paul or Reading on previous days. They bought St. Paul in the belief that something would be done for the stockholders at the annual meeting on Saturday last, and their purchases of Reading were made on the assumption that the Jersey Central Directors would increase their dividend and thus enable Reading to enlarge its distribution. In both cases disappointment followed their ventures, but in spite of this they trailed the buying of Pennsylvania yesterday on the theory that at the meeting of the Directors of that road to-day the much talked of $100,000,000 stock issue would be authorized and rights to stockholders accordingly granted.

The Break in Lehigh Valley.

On the Stock Exchange here the sensational break in Lehigh Valley shares on the Philadelphia market was followed with both interest and alarm, for the speculation in Lehigh shares, while conducted necessarily on the Philadelphia Exchange, has had its real inspiration in Wall Street. Apparently Lehigh had been linked up in some way with the Jersey Central dividend, for it was the announcement of the declaration by the Jersey Central Directors of the usual payment in place of the expected increase that precipitated the break. The only connection between Lehigh and Jersey Central seems to lie in the fact that Reading is a majority holder of Jersey Central stock and a minority holder of Lehigh Valley stock. Whatever the cause of the day's slump in Lehigh, its dimensions were apparently sufficient to make even Philadelphia take notice.

Alarming Cotton Crop Reports.

On the Cotton Exchange the sole topic of discussion through the day was the hurricane centring over a portion of the cotton belt. Private dispatches received from Southern correspondents by a number of cotton houses here reported the damage inflicted upon cotton by the storm as extensive, and, to add to the general unsettlement of sentiment, there was a further private report that half of the City of Natchez had been destroyed. A few reassuring reports, such as those which had the storm moving up the Mississippi Valley and doing damage only to the crops in the vicinity of the river, were overshadowed by the more sensational dispatches. Prices opened strong, sold up $1 or more a bale, and closed with the earlier advances considerably reduced.

Chemical Dividend Deferred.

The initial dividend on the common stock of the American Agricultural Chemical Company, which has been frequently predicted, but never declared, was passed over once more at yesterday's meeting of the Directors. Those who have been confident that the September meeting would result in action on this matter took comfort yesterday from the statement that action has been only deferred until the next quarterly meeting, and that the principal difference of opinion at yesterday's meeting arose over the rate of the dividend and not the question of paying one.

Price of Rubber Goods Advanced.

The United States Rubber interests who oppose a resumption of dividends on the common stock this Fall on account of the extremely high price of crude rubber which they have contended cannot be adequately met by advances in the prices of output, have had some of their argument taken from them by the fact that the company has actually put up quotations to the jobbers by about 5 per cent. This has been accomplished by a reduction of the initial discount from 25 to 20 per cent., which went into effect on Monday. This, of course, is only a fraction of the increase in the price of crude rubber.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—The local market opened strong this morning, and some early gains in the mining shares were recorded. United States Smelting reached 59, a new high record for the stock. Butte Coalition advanced to 27¼ and Lake Copper to 37½. The market continued irregular until the last half hour, when the undertone again became firm, and the market closed steady at a slight rally.

THE FOREIGN MARKETS.

Americans Close Easy and Irregular on the London Exchange.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Money was quiet and plentiful on the market to-day, and discounts were firmer.

The Stock Exchange continues dull with some irregularity in gilt-edged securities, which were affected by the prospects of higher discount rates in connection with the foreign gold demand. Home rails hardened on investment buying. Copper shares started well and closed easy on realizations. Kaffir shares were strong, but foreign bonds sagged.

American securities opened generally higher, the copper and steel shares leading the advance. Later the market reacted slightly, but at noon was steady, with prices ranging from ⅜ above to ¼ below yesterday's New York closing. Prices changed but little in the afternoon until Wall Street offerings were received, which caused a decline. Then the Harriman issues improved, but the market gave way, and the closing was easy and irregular.

Money, ½@¾ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 1⅝ per cent.; for three months' bills, 1¾ per cent.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were firm and the trading was quiet. The private rate of discount is ⅛ higher, at 2 per cent.

Exchange on London, 25f 14c for checks.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—American securities were weaker on the Boerse to-day, the market being unfavorably influenced by the high rate for money (5 per cent.) for settlement purposes.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.—Not in years had the local Exchange such an exciting session as occurred to-day. With a suddenness far more startling than its advance, and much more disastrous, Lehigh Valley stock tumbled within an hour from 113 down to 100¾, a loss of 12¼ points from the top and of 8½ points from last night's close. The rest of the local list was comparatively quiet.

READING'S REPORT SILENT ON "MELONS"

A YEAR OF GOOD BUSINESS

Earnings 9 Per Cent. Last Year by Reading Company—Their Stability Encouraging, President Baer Says.

In the annual report of the Reading Company for the year ended June 30 last, which was issued yesterday, there is no mention of the company's policy regarding larger distributions to stockholders, a matter which has engaged the attention of the Stock Exchange for a fortnight or more, owing to the movements of the common stock. As to the persistent rumors that Reading had increased its holdings of Lehigh Valley shares during the year the report puts a definite end to them, since it places these holdings at $1,000,000 par value, exactly the amount held a year ago.

The earnings of the Reading and its two subsidiaries, the Philadelphia & Reading Railway and the Philadelphia Coal & Iron Company, for the year, with comparisons, are reported as follows:

Net earnings	$2,746,825	$3,709,617	— $962,792

Depletion fund	465,767	514,349	— 48,582
	$2,572,975	$3,384,845
	$173,850	$324,771	— $150,921
Surplus	$66,973	$207,523	— $140,550
READING CO.—
Income	$9,076,153	$7,592,333	+$1,483,819
Expenses	33,972	97,190	— 63,218
Net earnings	$9,042,180	$7,495,143	+$1,547,037
Chgs. & taxes	4,626,785	4,599,553	+ 27,231
Surplus	$4,415,395	$2,895,589	+$1,519,805
Sur. 3 comp's.	$9,041,914	$9,448,752	— $406,838

Accumulated surpluses of the three companies on June 30, 1909, were, Reading Company, $17,612,171; Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company, $1,462,936; Philadelphia & Reading Railway, $9,721,612, a total of $28,796,720, an increase of $9,041,914 over 1908. Out of income the railway paid $1,805,722 for additions and betterments.

After payments of $6,072,669 for dividends and the sinking fund the surplus of the Reading Company for the year equaled a trifle less than 5 per cent. on the $70,000,000 of common stock, or a total earned for the stock of about 9 per cent., including the 4 per cent. paid.

The falling off in gross receipts of the Reading Company is explained as due to the general business depression, the loss in coal traffic alone amounting to $879,045. The loss of the Coal and Iron Company in income was due to much the same causes, total production of anthracite decreasing 1,140,847 tons, and receipts from sales $3,258,204.

President Baer reports that the properties were maintained in excellent condition, the Reading Company having charged to maintenance and paid to the Reading Company $1,489,000 in cash to cover equipment dismantled, which will be replaced by the Reading Company, as desired under the equipment leases. Summing up the year's operations Mr. Baer says:

"On the whole, the results of the operations of the company for the past fiscal year are very satisfactory, considering the condition during the year of the business of the country, and they show a stability of revenue under adverse circumstances that is very encouraging."

MUSIC NOTES.

Herbert Witherspoon, the American bass, who sings with the Metropolitan Opera Company, returned yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. proud of the fact that he had added to his weight at Carlsbad. He has added to his repertoire roles in "La Favorita" and "Germania."

"La Boheme" was substituted for "Le Barbiere di Siviglia," at the Acamedy of Music last night. Puccini's opera was given with the cast which has sung it many times before in this season at this house.

At the Manhattan "Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" were presented. Miss Cylva sang in both operas and Miss Desmond, who previously had been heard at a Sunday night concert, made her first appearance in opera here as Lola.

SUSPECT NOT IDENTIFIED.

Victim of Utica Tragedy Says Rizzo Resembles the Slayer.

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 21.—Fanny Infusino, who was wounded by the man who murdered her little brother and a girl companion at the Eagle Street culvert last Sunday, was taken from Faxton Hospital to the police station to-night. For several hours she was questioned by the police matron and Chief of Police Brophy. The child says that Theodore Rizzo looks more like the murderer than any of the scores of suspects who have been brought before her. His face is the same, she says, but the murderer's hair was longer.

It was established to-day that Rizzo was in front of the house where the three children lived less than twenty minutes before the children were kidnapped. Rizzo has maintained that he was in bed at that time.

WIDENER BACK FROM FRANCE.

Denies Report Cabled Here That He Had Given Up Racing.

Joseph E. Widener of Philadelphia, a son of P. A. B. Widener, returned yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. of the North German Lloyd Line, and denied the report recently cabled to this country that he had given up racing in France and was bringing his stable back here.

"If I have given it up, this is certainly the first I have heard about it," said Mr. Widener. "I have only half a dozen horses over there, and they are now in Winter quarters at Maisons-Lafitte.

"I have had a very pleasant season in France. There are few Americans racing over there, principally, I fancy, because American horses are not eligible for the flat races, but such as have been there cannot complain of an unfair treatment in the races in which their horses have been entered. Personally, I enjoyed my experience on the French turf thoroughly."

Mr. Widener, who was accompanied by Mrs. Widener and their two children, was met by his brother, George Widener.

Barnard School of Household Arts.

The building occupied by the Barnard School of Household Arts, at 226 West Seventy-ninth Street, was opened for inspection last week. The course includes cooking, embroidery, millinery, dressmaking, household decoration, accounts, and management. The entire resources of this school are devoted to this one branch of training.

George W. Perkins Buys Corbin House

George W. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co. has bought the dwelling at 76 Park Avenue from the estate of Austin Corbin. The price was about $150,000. Mr. Perkins, it is understood, intends to occupy the house during the Winter, maintaining his extensive establishment at Riverdale more especially for Summer use. The Park Avenue residence is of the five-story American-basement type, 25 by 100, on the west side of the avenue, just south of Thirty-eighth Street and not far from Mr. Morgan's home, at Madison Avenue and Thirty-sixth Street. The sale to Mr. Perkins was negotiated by Herbert A. Sherman and the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company.

Manhattan Company to Sing "Faust."

"Faust" will be sung for the first time this season next week Friday at the Manhattan Opera House, when it will be given with Miss Sylva as Marguerite, Mr. Duffault as Faust, Mr. Beck as Valentine, and Mr. Laskin as Mephistopheles.

Celebration Visitors at Theatres.

Hudson-Fulton Celebration visitors are beginning already to attend the theatres. At most of the important downtown houses last night there was a marked increase in attendance, and the proportion of out-of-town people was noticeably large. The theatres directly on Broadway were the most affected, though plays with well advertised names seemed to attract their quota of the advance guard of the crowds coming. The vaudeville houses had more than ordinarily large Tuesday night crowds.

SYNDICATE ACQUIRES CHATHAM NATIONAL

F. W. Ayer, a Philadelphia Banker, and Associates Get Control by Stock Purchases.

$350 TO $365 PER SHARE

Bank Was Organized in 1851 and George M. Hard Has Been President for 25 Years.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.—It was announced here to-day that Philadelphia interests had acquired control of the Chatham National Bank of New York City. The deal was brought about by F. W. Ayer, President of the Merchants' National Bank of this city, together with William Law, Vice President of that institution.

Mr. Law, in confirming the deal, said that the new interests include merchants, manufacturers, and business men of New England, New York State, Pennsylvania, and Ohio.

Stockholders of the Chatham National Bank have received circulars from a syndicate of business men who have recently acquired a large interest in the bank explaining that the new interests have acquired a considerable block of stock with the hope enlarge the scope of the institution.

The circular is signed by the law firm of Holt, Warner & Gaillard, representing the syndicate. Although the lawyers refused yesterday to make public the composition of the syndicate, it is known that one of the most active members is William A. Law, Vice President of the Merchants' National Bank of Philadelphia. It was stated yesterday that in getting together a number of his friends and associates to buy up stock of the Chatham National Bank, Mr. Law acted as an individual and that the Merchants' Nationl Bank of Philadelphia was in no way interested in the deal.

The only other members of the syndicate whose names are known are Sylvester Dunham, President of the Travelers' Insurance Company of Providence, and ex-Gov. Myron T. Herrick of Ohio.

The Chatham National Bank was organized in 1851 and is one of the few old-line mercantile banks south of Fulton Street. A large part of its business is done with the jewelry trade of Maiden Lane. It has deposits of $8,253,000, and according to the last report the net profits were $1,025,000. George M. Hard has been President for more than a quarter of a century. A representative of the syndicate said yesterday that it was the intention of his associates to work in harmony with the present management. It is stated that the average price paid for the stock was $350 a share and the maximum $365 a share. It could not be learned how large a block was obtained by the syndicate, although it is not believed that it holds an actual majority.

"SOO" ROAD'S GOOD EARNINGS.

President Pennington Tells of St. Paul-Minneapolis Terminals.

The gross earnings of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie, the "Soo Line," for the year ended June 30, shows the substantial gain of $1,160,232 in gross earnings over the showing of 1908. The actual figures were $2,609,299, which are almost equal to the showing of 1907, the best year in the road's history, when the gross totaled $12,832,079. The reduction of expenses by $115,589, to $7,097,716, left net at $5,511,582, which is actually better than in 1907 by $53,051, and exceeds the net earnings of last year by $1,275,820.

This large gain is illustrated in the decline of operating expenses from 63 per cent. of gross to 56 3-10 per cent. The item of "other income" decreased from $829,322 in 1908 to $356,299, leaving total income at $5,867,881, which was still over $800,000 larger than in 1908. The surplus of $2,533,644 remaining after the deduction of charges, taxes, &c., compares with the surplus of $2,000,869 in 1908. The balance left after the deduction of the usual 7 per cent. dividend on the preferred stock, amounting to $1,945,644, is equivalent to 11.58 per cent. on the $16,800,000 common stock.

Commenting on the important improvements under way and the increase in terminal facilities, President Pennington says:

"For several years past the work of acquiring terminal properties at St. Paul and Minneapolis has been quietly carried on, and the company has now secured terminals and rights of way to the same, which give independent entrance into both cities. To gain access to the St. Paul properties involved the construction of a 600-foot tunnel This work was begun in the year 1908, and its completion, together with the construction of yard tracks and freight stations, is expected by Jan. 1, 1910."

UNION PACIFIC'S BIG HOLDERS.

Exact Figures Given by Kuhn-Loeb Group in the Government's Suit.

In the current number of McClure's Magazine, Burton J. Hendrick, in an article entitled "The Most Powerful Men in America," has set forth, for the first time, the stock holdings in Union Pacific of the group of men who, with Mr. Harriman, controlled that property and its numerous allies. The article was prepared, of course, before Mr. Harriman's death, and the figures were taken from affidavits submitted by the men named in the pending Government suit to dissolve the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific alliance. The Union Pacific's stock amounts to $295,059,000.

Regarding these stock holdings, Mr. Hendrick's statement is, in part, as follows:

"The starting point and the present basis of the Harriman power is the Union Pacific Road; and even in the Union Pacific the Harriman syndicate controls less than 25 per cent. For the first time we are able to ascertain the combined personal interest in the Union Pacific Railroad of the individuals who in 1908 comprised the Harriman syndicate—Edward H. Harriman, Henry C. Frick, Henry H. Rogers, Otto Kahn, Jacob H. Schiff, James Stillman, and the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. The amounts are arranged in three classes: The stocks which these men hold 'separately'—which they individually control and can dispose of at will; the amounts which they own 'jointly'—in other words, those which they have turned into a 'pool' and agreed to keep intact for a specified period; and, thirdly, stocks not actually held by the men whose names are mentioned, but which, as 'syndicate' managers, they control. The figures are as follows:

"In the Southern Pacific, the members of the Harriman syndicate personally own comparatively insignificant amounts. Inasmuch as the Union Pacific holds in its own treasury 45 per cent. of Southern Pacific stock, and therefore receives nearly half its earnings, this fact, as far as the Harriman control is concerned, is not of much consequence."

WE LOSE TRADE IN CHINA.

Cotton Men Confer Here with Minister Crane on Proposed Remedies.

The decrease in the cotton trade between this country and China, and the remedies therefor, was the subject of a conference at the Century Club yesterday morning between Charles R. Crane, our new Minister to China, who starts for his post next Monday, and Lewis W. Parker, President of the Southern Cotton Manufacturing Association, and a delegation of cotton manufacturers. No decision was reached, but the manufacturers will prepare a report on trade conditions in China and forward it to Minister Crane in Peking.

"It was shown in the conference," said Minister Crane afterward, "that the trade of this country with China in cotton goods has decreased materially since the Russo-Japanese war. This is especially true in Manchuria—perhaps you had better say Northern China generally instead of Manchuria. It seems that the Russo-Japanese war put prices of cotton goods in China on a highly speculative basis. After the war there was naturally a reaction and falling off in demand. But the reasons therefor did not seem to be very clear in the minds of the gentlemen who conferred with me. They presented figures on the subject, but no very definite explanation. All they had to say on the subject will be set out in the report they agreed to prepare and forward to me in China. I might say, in passing, that the conference related entirely to cotton cloths, not to the raw material."

"Is this falling off in trade peculiar to American goods, or is it common to all foreign cotton goods?" Mr. Crane was asked.

"I understand that it applies to cotton goods sent to China from Europe as well as those from this country," Mr. Crane replied.

Kinko Duplex-Houses

If you could buy a new home for $5,500 cash for which you would otherwise pay $720 a year rent, you would consider it a bargain.

If that home were tax exempt, with no mortgage interest to pay, and you were furnished with hot-water heat, hot-water supply, and janitor service free of cost, you would consider it a remarkable investment.

The KINKO Duplex-Houses present such possibilities.

Besides they have a striking individuality in architecture, artistic decoration, and convenience of arrangement. Their construction is superior in quality and methods.

The FLORENTINE Group at Brooklyn Avenue and St. John's Place, one block North of Eastern Parkway, are offered for sale. Inspection and correspondence invited by

CASSIDY VICTOR IN QUEENS PRIMARIES

Contests in Manhattan and Brooklyn Bring No Notable Changes for Either Party.

McCARREN IN CONTROL

But He Gains No New Districts—Ely Defeated in Dady's Stronghold.

The only result of significance in yesterday's primary election was the rehabilitation of ex-President Joseph Cassidy of Queens as the Democratic leader of the borough. Cassidy emphatically ousted the Gresser-Harvey combination from power, and will control the delegations from Queens in the city, county, and borough conventions.

Borough President Gresser succeeded in retaining one of the four Assembly districts of the borough, his own, but it represents only ten delegates out of the thirty-four, and he and Sheriff Harvey, his co-partner in the leadership of the borough, since the downfall of the Cassidy rule with that of Borough President Bermel, will have to bow to the twenty-four votes.

Cassidy himself ran for the leadership of the First District in Long Island City. He won over Gresser's Superintendent of Highways, Patrick E. Leahy, by 816 votes. In the Second District George Wallace defeated Sheriff Harvey by 122 votes. Gresser won over ex-Sheriff Myerone, the Cassidy candidate, by 800 votes. Surrogate Noble defeated John Adikes in the Fourth by 72.

In Manhattan the principal contestants for the Tammany leaderships wasted their time, money, and muscle, the established control remaining unharmed.

The only changes on the Republican side were amicable ones. In the Fifteenth District, Harry W. Mack retired in favor of Assemblyman Bennett; in the Thirty-first John J. Lyons replaces Harvey T. Andrews.

Senator McCarren continues to rule nineteen of the twenty-three Brooklyn districts. His men who tried to oust the four leaders who are opposed to him were badly beaten and the insurgents who tried to defeat the McCarren men met the same fate.

The spectacular contest for the Republican leadership of the First Assembly District, in which Morris U. Ely, a Yale man and society leader, tried to oust the veteran politician, Michael J. Dady, resulted disastrously, Ely being beaten by 1,256 to 894.

In the Fourteenth District, Manhattan, where William A. Larney, Secretary of the Fire Department, was trying to defeat Deputy Sheriff Michael J. Cruise for the Tammany leadership, three men were sent to the hospital, and the arrests for fraudulent voting and disturbances in the polling places were many. The vote was 2,052 for Cruise and 907 for Larney. The former used to live in Leader Murphy's home district, and Larney charged him with being a "carpet-bagger" sent into the district by Murphy to take control.

Dominick Mullaney, who contested the leadership of "Battery Dan" Finn, in the First was badly beaten. D. W. Coughlin, who tried to oust John F. Curry, in the Thirteenth, met the same fate. He only obtained 380 votes to Curry's 2,800. Ross Williams, in the Seventeenth, beat his contestant, Daniel Golden, by 4,214 to 3. Golden is a Hearst man and was once strong in the district. Michael J. Hassett, who succeeded Magistrate Walsh, in the Twenty-first, had two men to fight. He disposed of them to the tune of 1,433 to 548 and 148.

Thomas E. Rush, in the Twenty-ninth, won from J. Edward Jetter, the brewer, obtaining 77 votes in Jetter's home election district to his 18. Percy Nagle, in the Thirtieth, won easily over James M. Spaulding. William E. Morris, in the Thirty-fifth, easily defeated Deputy Water Commissioner Marrin, former campaign manager of Park Commissioner Berry.

Among the Republicans, John J. Knewitz in the Thirty-second had about the only serious trouble. He defeated his opponent, however, by 526 to 244.

In Brooklyn there were ten bitterly fought Democratic contests, especially in the Second, Third, Sixth, Ninth, Tenth, and Eleventh Districts. In the Second and Third there was a great deal of violence and some twenty arrests. The vote was heavy. After it was all over and it was shown that his hold on the borough had not been loosened, Senator McCarren said that he was well satisfied with the result, although none of his men had been successful in their attempts to oust the four leaders who are opposed to him.

Besides the Dady-Ely fight there were only two other Republican contests in Brooklyn, in the Sixth and the Twentieth District. Neither resulted in changes. Senator Gledhill, in the Sixth, defeated his opponent, William F. McNamara, by 876 to 502.

Gov. Hughes Votes.

Gov. Hughes came down from Albany to cast his vote. He arrived at the Hotel Astor shortly after 4 o'clock, where he was met by Elihu Root, Jr., and Alderman B. W. B. Brown. With them he walked to the polling place of the Third Election District of the Twenty-seventh Assembly District, at 716 Eighth Avenue, and placed his ballot in the box. He shook hands with several people standing outside the booths, and chatted for a few moments with the election officers. The party then returned to the Astor, where the Governor had dinner. He left for Albany at 7 o'clock.

Attorney General O'Malley made arrangements for handling the usual election troubles early in the day. One of his first acts was to assign one of his staff to each of the Police Courts in the city.

The earliest charges of crookedness were made by D. W. Coughlin, who tried yesterday for the third time to oust John F. Curry from the Tammany leadership of the Thirteenth Assembly District.

One of the first arrests of the day was that of Aaron Chornstein, Chairman of the Board of Inspectors of the Twenty-second and Twenty-third Election Districts of the Twenty-ninth Assembly District. He was taken into custody on the complaint of Archibald Stein of 128 East Eighty-third Street, who said he saw Chornstein thrust a handful of ballots into the box at the polling place at 65 East Eighty-eighth Street. The Inspector was taken to the Harlem Court and arraigned before Magistrate Steinert, who paroled him until to-day, after issuing subpoenas for the other election officers at the booth.

Jacob H. Gridinger of 1,703 Washington Avenue, a Marrin supporter, was arrested at the polling place at 4,187 Park Avenue on a charge of disorderly conduct. Magistrate Butts discharged him in the Morrisania Court.

Edward Lucas, a Marrin watcher at the polling place at 230th Street and Bailey Avenue, caused the arrest of a man who attempted to vote in the name of James Kane of 2,880 Bailey Avenue. Lucas declared that the man was not Kane, and that the latter had moved out of the district. Magistrate Butts held the prisoner in $1,000 bail for examination to-day.

Another arrest was made at the same polling place of a man who practically admitted his guilt by giving another name in court than that under which he had attempted to vote. He presented a ballot and gave his name as Alfred Spry of 3,141 Bailey Avenue. John J. Cronin, Jr., a Marrin watcher, immediately challenged the vote, and the man was arrested. In court he said he was Richard Coffee of 327 Cherry Street. He also was held in $1,000 bail.

Magistrate Krotel, sitting in the Yorkville Court, discharged four men brought before him and characterized their arrest as "foolish." He held Norris Klieman of 226 East 115th Street in $500 on a charge of intimidating voters at the polling place of the Sixteenth Election District of the Twenty-ninth Assembly District.

Joseph Grandon, an Inspector at the polling place at 1,414 Lexington Avenue, was arrested on the complaint of John J. O'Brien, who declared he had seen him put a handfull of ballots in the box. When the case was called before Magistrate Steinert in the Harlem Court, the charge was corroborated by Irving Beck, a teacher, of 119 East Ninety-sixth Street. Grandon was paroled until this morning.

Dominick Mullaney, who contested the Tammany leadership of "Battery Dan" Finn in the First Assembly District, caused the arrest of John Ford of 195 Prince Street on a charge of attempting to vote on a different name than that under which he registered. He was held in $1,000 bail.

Louis Cungaro, an Inspector in the Tammany polling place at 814 Tenth Avenue, in John F. Curry's district, was held in $1,000 by Magistrate Kernochan in the West Side Court on a charge of ballot-box stuffing. In the same court John Murphy, who said he lived at 445 West Fifty-fifth Street, was held in $500 on a charge of fraudulent voting. At the same booth Frank Brady of 401 West Forty-sixth Street was arrested on a charge of fraudulent voting, and was also held in $500. William Michael of 8 West Sixty-fifth Street, an Inspector, caused the arrest of Thomas Gaffney, a chauffeur, who said that he lived at 19 West Sixty-fifth Street, at the same place. He was discharged.

Maurice Gottlieb of 104 East Eighty-first Street, a lawyer and a supporter of J. Edward Jetter, was arrested at the polling place at 1,150 Lexington Avenue, but was discharged by Magistrate Steinert in the Harlem Court.

Joseph Zursluh, a watcher at the polling place at 3,651 Third Avenue, caused the arrest of a man who attempted to vote under the name of Henry Weber of 3,539 Third Avenue. He declared in court that he knew Weber, and the prisoner was not he. Magistrate Butts imposed the usual $1,000 bail.

William Clarke, Chairman of the Board of Election Inspectors of the Thirty-third Election District of the Thirty-fifth Assembly District, was arrested on the complaint of James Martin, a contractor, on a charge of not being a resident of the district. He was later discharged by Magistrate Butts.

Burglars Loot J. L. Phillips's House.

After holding high carnival from time to time during the Summer in the home of Jacob L. Phillips, at 49 East Sixty-seventh Street, between Fifth and Madison Avenues, while the family were at their country home in Elberon, N. J., burglars finally leisurely looted the place from cellar to attic, carrying away at least $5,000 worth of plunder and leaving no trace to their identity.

Mr. Phillips, who is President of the Traders' Commercial Company of 320 Broadway, went to Elberon early in the Summer with his wife, two sons, and a daughter. They took their housekeeper, Mrs. Katherine O'Brien, and closed up their city home. During the Summer Mr. Phillips commuted from Elberon to the city, but he never visited his Sixty-seventh Street home. His wife went there a few times early in the Summer, but the last visit she paid was in July.

On Monday the Phillipses decided to return to the city, and Mrs. O'Brien, the housekeeper, was sent ahead to open up the house and put it in order. When she entered the house Monday morning she found everything in the greatest confusion. The looters had cleaned out the place of their leisure. Their plunder was worth about $5,000.

Shoots Laundryman, Kills Himself.

As Philip Rose, a laundryman of 882 Prospect Avenue, the Bronx, was talking yesterday morning about 9 o'clock with Elsie Range, one of his sorters and menders, and Eugene Kercher, an ironer, was fetching a hot iron from the stove, Christian Duffrin, a silver polisher of 729 Manida Street, Hunt's Point, entered the store. He was the husband of the owner of the building in which the laundry is housed, and had had a dispute over a small amount of money with Rose.

The laundryman got up and stepped across the floor to meet him.

"I'm about tired of the way you talk of me," said Duffrin. "I've got a summons with me for you."

As he spoke he drew a revolver, and firing at close range hit Rose just below the tenth rib on the left side. Rose fell and Elsie Range screamed. Kercher dropped his iron and ran to help the wounded man, and Duffrin turned quickly and walked out of the store. As he reached the curb he put the revolver to his head and pulled the trigger. The bullet flew wide. Duffrin recocked the revolver and fired again. This time his aim was true and he fell dead.

Rose was taken to Lebanon Hospital, where the doctors think he will die.

Suffrage Banner Unfurled.

The first woman suffrage street banner ever hung in New York City or State was unfurled yesterday afternoon by the American Suffragettes and swung out across East Twenty-third Street in front of their headquarters. It was a picture banner of many colors and many lines of lettering. It was received with cheers and clapping from a crowd of at least 300 persons, largely men, who had gathered in front of the building.

The banner was the gift of Lady Cook of England.

THREE GET BULLETS IN A PRIMARY FIGHT

Five Quick Shots Fired at a Polling Place in Second Avenue.

"GUERRILLAS" OUT IN AUTOS

Larney and Cruise Henchmen Drive Over the District and Keep the Police Busy.

The fight for the Tammany leadership of the Fourteenth Assembly District, which includes that territory between Twenty-fourth and Forty-second Streets from Lexington Avenue to the East River, which William A. Larney is waging against Michael J. Cruise, the leader appointed last June by Murphy, resulted yesterday in the shooting of three men, one of whom will probably die.

This man is a Larney henchman, but whether or not his assailant professed allegiance to Cruise or to Larney is not known, for many of the throng that witnessed the shooting declared that the bullets received by the wounded man were meant for Cruise, who stood near him, while others are equally certain that the shots found the mark for which they were intended.

The shooting occurred outside of the little barber shop at 546 Second Avenue, the polling place at which the victim, Frederick Lucas, a prize fighter, was about to cast his ballot. All day long the place had been the scene of frequent disorders. There had been a score or more of fist fights, and Policemen Twomey, New, and Golden of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station, who were stationed there, had their hands full in maintaining order.

The most serious of the outbreaks occurred shortly after 6 o'clock, and in the presence of the rival candidates for leadership. Both Larney and Cruise spent the day touring the district in automobiles, stopping at polling place after polling place, and both reached the little Second Avenue barber's shop just after Lucas, himself riding in an automobile with half a dozen of his kind, had stopped across the street.

Larney and Cruise became engaged in an altercation, and, according to the police, Larney suddenly called Lucas to him. The prizefighter and his strong-arm companions poured out of the automobile and started for the polling place in front of which a fight was already in progress.

Guessing that the crowd meant to rush the ballot box, the policemen sprang inside the barber's shop, Twomey stationing himself at the dor with a revolver in his hand. Every man inside the place was ordered out, and Twomey shouted that he would shoot the first man who tried to enter. Just then five pistol shots rang out. As the first one sounded Lucas uttered a cry and sank to the ground, blood flowing from his mouth, where a bullet had entered.

The policemen rushed for the door, but by the time they reached the sidewalk the crowd was scattering in every direction. In the gutter lay Lucas, now almost unconscious, for four other bullets had entered his body, one in the left shoulder, another in his abdomen, and the third in his side.

Just before the sound of the first shot, Twomey heard some one shout:

"The wop struck me. I'll fix him."

The policemen ran to Lucas, therefore, convinced that he knew his assailant and demanded to know who had done the shooting. Lucas shook his head.

"Oh, I'll never tell you," he replied feebly. "I ain't in so bad. I'll get him when I get out."

Twomey sent in a call for the reserves and Inspector Walsh responded with the men from five precincts. The Inspector was angry clear through and the order which he shouted to his men in the hearing of both Larney and Cruise, was: "Go through this district and kick every guerilla out of it. If you have to use your night sticks to do it, don't be afraid of using them. Get the guerillas out. We'll have no more violence here, anyway."

The men scattered through the district and presently picked up John S. Butcher, who says he lives on Shelter Island, but who, the police declare, has been sleeping on whatever canal boat would give him room, and Christopher Wright of 303 East Twenty-seventh Street. Butcher was shot in the left shoulder, and had several scalp wounds. Wright had a bullet wound in his left shoulder.

Both men were sent to Bellevue Hospital, where Lucas had been taken already. Butcher was arrested as a material witness, but Wright was not arrested. Soon after Lucas reached the hospital, several detectives brought in Edward J. Harvey of 332 East Thirtieth Street, an employe in the Water Department and a brother of Charles Harvey, the sporting man and promoter of prizefights.

Harvey had spent the entire day in Cruise's automobile, but nevertheless the police led him before Lucas and asked the wounded man to identify him.

"Ah, I ain't identifyin' no one," responded the wounded man.

Nevertheless Harvey was sent to Police Headquarters a prisoner, charged with being implicated in the shooting.

The detectives made another arrest while in the hospital, the victim being Albert Gaimari of 142 Cherry Street, who had accompanied a stepbrother of Lucas to the hospital. Gaimari said he was the man who carried the story of the shooting to Lucas's family, and the police declared that he knew more than he was telling, and so locked him up.

That serious trouble on primary day was not unexpected by the police is shown by the fact that Capt. Clay of the East Thirty-fifth Street Police Station, a brother-in-law of Murphy, went away on sick leave some time ago, and left his precinct in charge of Acting Captain Nolan. Capt. Clay thus avoided all of the difficulties likely to arise from the district fight.

The fight practically started last June when Cruise was nominally elected leader of the district to take the place of William J. Boyhan, who was appointed a Judge of the Municipal Court. Cruise, who formerly lived in the gas house district, Murphy's home district, where he was a district captain for the Tammany Hall leader, was known there as a "carpet-bagger." Larney, on the other hand, was an old resident of the district, and when Cruise won the leadership through Murphy's influence the native son declared himself on the warpath.

Ever since last June, Larney has been working for a victory at the primaries, and the fight in the district has been one of the hottest in the city, although Larney and Cruise have insisted that they were good friends.

Both men have insisted that they wanted a clean fight at the polls, but nevertheless yesterday saw hundreds of "guerrillas" flooding the district from the gas house district on the south and Corcoran's Roost on the north. From the west side came more of them, and presently fights were flourishing throughout the district.

Detectives from the precinct and from the Central Office were scattered all over the district, and there was work for all of them. Central Office men McMullen, Dolan, and Murphy were in Third Avenue when they saw a gang of eight "guerrillas" coming along, knocking men, women, and children into the gutter, while one of them openly swung in his hand a blackjack.

They attempted to push the detectives from the sidewalk, not knowing them for policemen, and instantly the detectives' blackjacks were brought into play. When the rest managed to escape Fred Wagner of 329 West Forty-fourth Street, John Steele of 548 West Fifty-third Street, and William Keating of 592 Ninth Avenue were in the hands of the detectives and needed the attention of an ambulance surgeon before they could be taken to Headquarters.

Lucas, according to the police, is not the real name of the man who is dying in Bellevue. They say he is Antonio Polastro and that he lives at 36 Oak Street.

Larney and Cruise, the contending leaders, both hold city positions. Larney is Secretary of the Fire Department and lives at 322 East Thirtieth Street. Cruise is a Deputy Sheriff and lives at 237 East Thirtieth Street, less than a block away from his rival.

DR. SAVAGE QUITS THE PULPIT.

Clergyman Finally Decides to Retire Permanently from the Ministry.

Dr. Minot Judson Savage, who as head of the Unitarian Church of the Messiah for almost ten years up to 1904 had the reputation of being one of the best preachers in the city, has now retired from the pulpit and from public life for good and all. His reported intention to take this step was confirmed yesterday by his friend the Rev. Dr. Robert Collyer of 201 West Fifty-fifth Street.

Dr. Savage reached here from England on the Celtic last Sunday and left that afternoon for Cleveland, Ohio, which he will make his residence from now on. Dr. Collyer said he had completely recovered from the breakdown that caused his retirement in 1904, and that he would now give up his time to writing.

EX-WALL STREET MAN DIES IN POVERTY

Wallace Scott, Whose Fortune Went in Crash in 1904, Found in Mills Hotel.

LONG A BEAU BRUMMEL

Wore Silk Hat and Boutonniere in the Bowery as Long as His Money Held Out.

Wallace Scott, 60 years old, who came from the South some thirty years ago and plunged into Wall Street, and who, after some spectacular up and downs, drifted to the Bowery, was found dead yesterday morning in a room at Mills Hotel No. 2, at Rivington and Chrystie Streets. There was nothing suspicious about his death. The Coroners' office said that apoplexy had killed him. He had reached the very end of his finances. On Monday he borrowed 50 cents from an old business partner with which to buy some food and pay for a room at the Mills Hotel.

When Wallace Scott arrived in New York thirty years ago he had enough money to call some attention to himself in Wall Street. He bought a house in West Twenty-third Street, and there maintained a home that was noted for its hospitality. He had brought with him his wife and two children. He seemed to be prospering in Wall Street.

Some trouble arose between him and his wife after a number of years and they separated, she going to Chicago to live and taking the two children with her. About the same time there came business troubles upon the head of Scott. A stock market crash in 1904 destroyed him financially. He sold his home and went to the Bowery.

He did not lose himself in degraded dissipation. He did not mix with the usual Bowery types. He did not lose his neat, personal manners. Only the most vicious poverty robbed him of his high silk hat. Only the most pressing hunger made him buy food instead of a nosegay for his coat. He never suffered the loss of an ancient frock coat he had held out of the wreck of his rich things.

The belief that if he only had a fair chance again he could put himself on his feet by playing the market was of course his. In his wanderings he met Richard Taylor, proprietor of the People's Baths, at 9 Centre Market Place, and they formed the firm of Scott & Taylor, stock brokers, with an office at 35 Wall Street. In July, this year, they sold out and dissolved partnership. Mr. Taylor wanted to quit, but Scott wanted to keep on. Scott, who in his later years was known in the financial district as "Old Man Scott," invested his money as soon as he could, and evidently lost it all again.

On Monday he called on Mr. Taylor, had luncheon with him, borrowed 50 cents from him, but said no word about poverty. Yesterday morning he was found dead in bed. His body is being held to await the orders of his wife.

Ice Trust Seeks Delay.

Within a week of the date set for the trial in the criminal branch of the Supreme Court, Joseph S. Auerbach of counsel for the American Ice Company applied to Justice Brady yesterday for an order directing Attorney General O'Malley to make more definite and specific the complaint under which the American Ice Company was indicted in the Spring on the charge of being an illegal trust in restraint of trade. The court, in reserving decision, promised to make it known by Tuesday next at the latest.
